CAMPBELLSVILLE UNIVERSITY OFFERING JANUARY TERM WITH NEW CLASSES ONLINE

By Joan C. McKinney, news and publications coordinator

CAMPBELLSVILLE, Ky. – Campbellsville University's January term offers undergraduate offerings, including three new online courses in business and history.

The term, which begins Jan. 4 and runs through Jan. 15, offers students a chance to get some extra hours in a concentrated schedule.

The three online courses will be BA 413-01, Managerial Decision Making, with Dr. Rick Corum, associate professor of business administration (management), as the instructor; BA 483-01, Operation Management being taught by Amanda Ewing, instructor in business and economics; and HST 131-01, World Civilization to 1650 taught by Dr. John Burch, dean of distance learning and associate professor.

Other classes offered include ones in New Testament, computer concepts and applications, social statistics, introduction to physical activity, walking/jogging for health fitness, United States history since 1877, general psychology and introduction to literature.

“Campbellsville University offers these classes in January for students to get ahead or catch up on their studies,” according to Dave Walters, vice president for admissions and student services.

Walters said the classes include both introductory and higher level courses and offer the student smaller class sizes and intense study in a concentrated period of time.

He said new students who want to take the classes need to check with the Office of Admissions at 270-789-5220 or admissions@campbellsville.edu for the first step in the admissions process. Returning CU students can contact their advisor.
