A Word from the President...

June 2011

Dr. Michael V. Carter

The spring 2011 semester at Campbellsville University has been a very successful and memorable time. Our total enrollment of 3,282 represents our 22nd consecutive semester of total head count. We also had a record number of graduates, 517, including those who received their diplomas in December and on May 13 and 14. The enrollment at our regional centers grew by 22 percent from spring 2010 to 2011 and enrollment in online programs increased by 33 percent.

It is apparent that the value of a degree from Campbellsville University—both in terms of academic quality and the emphasis on Christian servant leadership—is being recognized by more and more prospective students.

During the month of April, we celebrated the 15th anniversary of Campbellsville College changing to Campbellsville University. As outlined in an article in this issue of the Campbellsvillian, the move to university status in April 1996 by the CU Board of Trustees, and then President Dr. Ken Winters, was a strategic move that contributed to our momentum and gave CU a heightened level of respect around the Commonwealth and nation. Our successes today result, in part, from the vision shown in that bold move.

Dr. Bill Mackey, retiring executive director of the Kentucky Baptist Convention, was our speaker for the May 13 masters' level commencement ceremony, and Dr. Kevin Cosby, pastor of St. Stephen Church and president of Simmons College of Kentucky in Louisville, spoke for our May 14 commencement for our baccalaureate graduates.

The class of 2011 has been a very impressive group of student leaders over the course of their time at Campbellsville University, and I feel good about the future of our state and nation as they go from here and begin to serve in their professions of choice.

There are numerous examples, in the class of 2011, of young men and women who will share with you of how they have found their calling at Campbellsville University and their call to living lives of Christian servant leadership—giving of themselves and their resources in service to others in the name of Jesus Christ! That is why Campbellsville University's mission is needed now more than ever before!

Another highlight of the spring semester was the launching of WLCU-FM Radio at 88.7. We are very pleased with the broadcast range, and it will be listened to via Internet streaming around the world in the near future.

We continue to implement Vision 2025 – Preparing Christian Servant Leaders as the blueprint for the next decade and half. Vision 2025 is the broad outline of where Campbellsville University is headed, and we are filling in the details in our annual strategic planning process.

This is illustrated by the construction of an additional 48 beds of housing for female students in preparation for our fall 2011 semester. Additional properties have been recently purchased around the neighborhood that will allow for additional projects and facilities.

We are working to increase green space for our students with plans under way for a walking track, practice field, and an eventual track facility for our competitive track athletic teams. We are continuing to make improvements to landscaping around the campus and receive many positive comments from campus visitors on the improving aesthetics of the campus and facilities.

Vision 2025 is moving us to plan for the future in a very strategic manner. Architectural plans for the new school of business building are being tweaked, and we are continuing to raise funds for this new three-story 21,000-square-foot building.

We unveiled the new name of the school of business and economics—The J. Chester Porter and Maria L. Bouvette School of Business and Economics—at the April 25 Derby Rose Gala in recognition of the lead gifts from Mr. Porter and Ms. Bouvette. The gala, sponsored by the Advancement Board, was successful in raising $28,800 for the CU Scholarship Fund.

We are also working hard on architectural plans for a new wellness center that is needed to accommodate our growing student population. Plans are being finalized for the new “alumni park” that will be located at the corner of North Columbia Avenue and Broadway.

We are moving forward on development of a new “art village” for the visual arts and on plans to enclose the area between Davenport Student Commons and Winters Dining Hall. Expanded dining opportunities will be announced in the near future.

Thank you for your continuing prayers and support. We have a growing number of Campbellsville University alumni around the world in a variety of positions of influence and service. Please know that we value you as alumni and friends of this great institution.

Most cordially,

Michael V. Carter, President

Third Derby Rose Gala raises money for student scholarships

By Joan C. McKinney, editor

The third annual Derby Rose Gala, a fundraising event, raised $28,800—the most ever—for student scholarships April 25.

The CU Advancement Board organizes the gala, which featured John Asher, vice president of racing communications at Churchill Downs. Asher told the audience various stories about working at Churchill Downs and said he was “one of the luckiest people in the world.”

He said Churchill Downs is “in the business of dreams,” and the Kentucky Derby is “the ultimate dream.” He said Campbellsville University is in the business of “giving students the foundation to achieve their dreams.”

He said the singing of “My Old Kentucky Home” at the Derby is emotional, and he praised Betty Porter, who sang the song at the gala.

Sara Curry, chair of the Advancement Board, said the Derby Rose Gala is planned all year long, and she praised this year's chair, Gwinn Thompson Hahn, and Betty Hord, decorating chair, plus the board, for their hard work.

About 200 people attended the event in the Winters Dining Hall.

Campbellsville University and Kentucky Community and Technical College System sign multi-program transfer agreement

Campbellsville University and Kentucky Community and Technical College System (KCTCS) signed a transfer agreement April 5 allowing students from KCTCS to almost “seamlessly” transfer to CU.

The multi-program transfer agreement, the first of its type to be signed, is a collaboration between the two institutions for students who have completed their associate’s degree to continue their education at Campbellsville University in the bachelor degree program.

The programs that are included in this agreement are: criminal justice, business administration, business management and early childhood education and interdisciplinary early childhood education.

Since 2005, 433 students from KCTCS have transferred to Campbellsville University, and the rate of graduation is 70 percent.

Dr. Michael V. Carter, president of Campbellsville University, said, “Seventy percent is a fantastic rate. This means we know KCTCS students are focused, they know their goals and they are pursuing those goals.”

Dr. Michael McCall, president of KCTCS, said, “This is a tremendous celebration. We have people here from Washington, the state level and the local community. This shows we’re about a partnership for the betterment of Kentucky...it is important we see this cooperation reach into the future.

“It is important we reach out to see the value students need to transfer and become a better person for the development of our state.”

McCall said the transfer agreement is a way of “providing a point of access to higher education that other institutions can’t do.”

Dr. Robert King, president of the Council on Postsecondary Education, said in every visit he has with legislators they said “you have to deal with this transfer stuff.”

King said, “This transfer agreement has created the missing alignment between technical colleges, a bachelor’s degree and starting a career.”

King also said the effort recognizes what we will “no longer leave to serendipity;” that the student will figure it out on their own if they want to transfer.

Dr. Frank Cheatham, vice president for academic affairs at CU, said, “Our goal is for students to come to Campbellsville, get a quality education, graduate and become a servant leader.”

Cindy Dishman, a social work student at CU who was a graduate of Somerset Community College, said, “It was 333 days ago that I graduated from Somerset Community College. In another 256 days I will reach another milestone...graduating from Campbellsville University with a bachelor’s in social work.”

Dishman is the first college graduate in her family. “The transfer allowed me to achieve more in my life than I ever felt possible. It allowed me to have roots and also to have wings.”

John Chowning, vice president for church and external relations and executive assistant to the president, said the agreement is a way of “providing students like Cindy with the opportunity to meet needs so others like her can continue to expand their education... this provides the opportunity to students all across the Commonwealth to transfer without worrying about whether or not their credits will transfer.”

Dr. Brenda Priddy, dean of the School of Education, said the two institutions have “worked together to find common ground in their missions.” She also said it is the “commitment to higher education pathways for students who otherwise may not think they have a way to earn a bachelor’s degree. We are serving the students of today and tomorrow.”

Campbellsville University's Korey Mitchell is on track to practice rural medicine

By Phil Carlisle, student news writer

"Campbellsville University gave me a tremendous education and an opportunity to play collegiate athletics," said Korey Mitchell, a 2007 graduate of CU. "But it also taught me so much more."

Honored with the title of Mr. Campbellsville in 2007, Mitchell graduated with a Bachelor of Science in biology and called the education he received from CU "second to none."

"CU is a fantastic institution to receive a top-grade education, but it also gave me a lot of life experiences," Mitchell said. "I developed so many friendships with my teammates, classmates, coaches, faculty and staff that I'll never forget."

One such friendship was with Dr. Michael V. Carter, president of CU.

"Korey is someone who knows how to be loyal and faithful and he kept his goals in mind as he moved through CU to graduation," Carter said. "He was an outstanding student, an inspirational athlete and a fine Christian role model."

Mitchell, a native of Huntington, W. Va., graduated in May from the Joan C. Edwards School of Medicine at Marshall University where he has been studying since 2007. After graduation, Mitchell applied for a family medicine residency position that will last for three years.

"My goal is ultimately to practice rural medicine in my home state of West Virginia and to serve as a medical missionary," Mitchell said.

Mitchell already has first-hand experience as a medical missionary, having spent a week and a half traveling to remote areas of Honduras setting up different medical clinics.

"You see commercials daily concerning countries where children are going hungry and medical attention is not available," Mitchell said. "However, when you see firsthand children and adults walking for several miles just for the chance to receive medication and possibly something to eat, it becomes very real. As a result, I've developed a true passion for practicing rural and international medicine."

During his time at CU, Mitchell was also an integral member of the men's varsity basketball team.

Keith Adkins, head coach of the men's varsity basketball team, said, "Korey is among the best we've ever had in combining a great playing career with a very successful academic career," Adkins said.

Today, Mitchell remains actively involved with his local church and enjoys spending quality time with his family. He credits CU for serving as the platform to help him grow as a person.

"My four years at CU were the first time I had ever really been away from home," Mitchell said. "My need to balance education and athletics taught me to manage the stresses of life and helped make me a well-rounded person."

During his time as the president of CU, Carter has seen many students come and go, but Korey Mitchell is one he will not soon forget.

"I'm very proud of Korey," Carter said. "He has an attitude that is so positive and helpful, and his concern for others shows the depth of his heart and his love for Christ. I look forward to seeing how his career evolves and how God uses him to touch thousands in the years to come."

Mr. and Miss Campbellsville University for 2011 announced

By Katie Johnson, student news writer

Micah Spicer and Alison Medders were announced as Mr. and Miss Campbellsville University 2011 at CU's Honors and Awards Day April 27.

"This award is such an honor considering all of the outstanding students on campus. I am very flattered to be the recipient of such a distinguished award from the university," Medders, Miss Campbellsville University, said.

Medders lives in Florence, Ala., but was formerly of Campbellsville, Ky., with a major in political science and a minor in homeland security. She was a member of the Campbellsville University cheerleading squad and a part of the Crazy Love Bible study leadership team.

"Campbellsville is my home, and every person that I have come in contact with has helped shape my journey with their Christian mentoring and guidance in my life, both in and out of the classroom," Medders said.

Spicer is a double major in pastoral ministries and political science from Wingo, Ky.

Spicer was the Student Government Association president as well as a member of Omicron Delta Kappa, Theta Alpha Kappa and Alpha Chi honor societies.

"The Campbellsville University community has served me well. Faculty members have held me accountable in the classroom, staff members have proven themselves as excellent mentors to me," Spicer said.

Both Spicer and Medders served on the university's LINC Summer Orientation team.

Mr. and Miss Campbellsville University are awards that are given to graduating seniors who best demonstrate the university's typical student based on scholarship, leadership, character and potential for success.

Eastridge Wins Campbellsville University's Distinguished Faculty Award

Dr. Darlene Eastridge, dean of the Carver School of Social Work and professor of social work at Campbellsville University, has been awarded the 2011 Distinguished Faculty Award at Campbellsville University's Honors and Awards Day.

The decision to award Eastridge was made by CU's Advancement Board. Roy Rich, a member of the Advancement Board, presented Eastridge with the award, a stole and a check for $3,000. "It's a very tough job and gets harder every year because we have so many outstanding professors," Rich said.

Eastridge joined Campbellsville University's faculty in 1994 and is currently in her 17th year with the institution.

Upon receiving the award, Eastridge said, "I've been blessed to be at Campbellsville for 17 years, and it's the greatest 17 years of my life. It is great to have a job that you go to every day, love doing it, and knowing that you touched so many lives."

She has obtained several degrees in her field over the years, including an associate degree in sociology, bachelor's degree in psychology and sociology from Campbellsville in 1986, a master's in education/counseling, a master's in social work, and a doctorate in social work.

Eastridge gained accreditation for CU's Bachelor of Social Work program from the Council on Social Work Education and is pursuing accreditation for the master's program at CU.

Along with her efforts for Campbellsville University, Eastridge is a local leader, serving as a member of the interagency council, and is an advisory board member at the Men's Recovery Center.

She is also chair of the Kentucky Association of Social Workers, Lake Cumberland Branch. She is an active member of and site visitor for the Council on Social Work Education, the Baccalaureate Program Directors Association, and the Kentucky Association of Social Work Educators.

She is married to Ronnie Eastridge and they have two children, Dana Milby and Josh Eastridge. She also has one grandson, Brandon Mattingly.

Campbellsville University presents Servant Leadership Awards

Campbellsville University honored two students, Olivia Brainard from Somerset, Ky., and Jordan Cornett from Lexington, Ky., as the 2011 recipients of the Barney II and Moore Foundation Servant Leadership Award during Honors and Awards Day.

Dr. Robert VanEst, associate professor of education; and Connie Wilson, academic coordinator, also received the Servant Leadership Award.

Cornett spent last summer in Port-au-Prince, Haiti, where she worked in an orphanage named Alex's House. Alex was a Haitian who was killed in the Haiti earthquake.

Cornett said she defines a servant leader as the most challenging call of a Christian. She said being a servant leader requires a great deal of humility and love.

After spending the summer in Haiti, Cornett said, "I came home with a whole new perspective and a desire to spend my life overseas doing missions."

Cornett will be donating her Servant Leadership Award money to Alex's House.

Brainard defines a servant leader as "one who paves the way to serving others by actually taking steps to better their circumstances and do so without seeking recognition."

After graduation, she intends to work in international adoptions.

She will be donating her Servant Leadership Award money to the Central Kentucky Crisis Pregnancy Center.

VanEst has served at Campbellsville University since August 2001.

Wilson is in her 35th year working at CU, and received her bachelor of science from CU in 1996.

For the ninth year in a row, Campbellsville University awarded the prestigious Algernon Sydney Sullivan Award at commencement.

"Sullivan was a lawyer, devout Christian, mediator, powerful and appealing orator, a courageous citizen during perilous times, a noted philanthropist and a devoted family man," said Dr. Michael V. Carter, president of Campbellsville University.

This year's student recipient was Micah Spicer from Wingo, Ky. Some of Spicer's honors while at CU include: president of the Student Government Association, class president, and member of Omicron Delta Kappa, Alphi Chi and Theta Alpha Kappa.

Spicer served as a pastoral ministries intern at Campbellsville Baptist Church and a legislative internship with State Representative Jody Richards. He was named 2011 "Mr. Campbellsville."

"Micah has demonstrated a spirit of Christian servant leadership while at CU," Carter said. "He has given of himself in service to others in the name of Jesus Christ."

This year's community recipient is Dr. James E. Jones. He is a member of the CU Board of Trustees and Church Relations Council. Jones is a part-time assistant in the Office of Church and External Relations and an adjunct faculty member in the School of Theology, all while serving his third term as an elected member of the Taylor County Fiscal Court.

"Dr. Jones has a pastor's heart, a servant's humility and the passion of an evangelist and missionary," Carter said. "He is one of the fine pulpiteers of Southern Baptist life today."

Wilson and his new letter jacket are inseparable

Editor's Note: This article was printed with permission from the Lexington Herald-Leader.

By Merlene Davis

J.C. Wilson of Lexington earned his letter jacket playing basketball in 1951-52 at what was then Campbellsville College.

He had dropped hints to his family over the years, hoping one of them would give it to him for Christmas. No one did.

He had written to various people, hoping to find out how he could get it himself. He received no replies.

Still, J.C. Wilson of Lexington could not let go of his dream of replacing the letter jacket he had owned nearly 60 years ago when he helped Campbellsville College, as Campbellsville University was known then, win its basketball conference and compete in the national Junior College Basketball Tournament.

"I always wanted a new jacket," Wilson said. "But I never had the opportunity, the time or the money to get one."

But after recent heart surgery and a knee replacement, Wilson decided it was time. "I said if I'm ever going to do it, I'd better get it done," he said.

The jacket had special meaning for Wilson. In 1951, when he graduated from the now defunct Liberty High School in Liberty, Wilson turned his attention toward the University of Kentucky to further his education. His father gave him enough money for a deposit on his room and tuition, but Wilson wasn't sure he could make a go of it.

"I didn't think I was grounded enough," Wilson said. "I didn't have a very good high school background."

The night before he was to leave for UK, the president of Campbellsville College came to Wilson's church and offered him a basketball scholarship.

"The next day instead of going to UK, I enrolled there," Wilson said.

He credits the nurturing he received at Campbellsville with helping him to become a civil engineer, a degree he later earned at UK after two years in the Army.

"At Campbellsville they take you under their wing and spend more time with you," he said.

Wilson played guard the first year and cherished the time spent on the team. Shortly before practice started in his second year on the team, he broke his ankle. It never healed well enough for him to play again.

He attended UK for a year after graduating from Campbellsville, but he never quite adjusted. His money was running out, so he requested to be drafted into the Army, as his father had suggested.

A couple of days after finals ended, he headed for the Army, making sure to tuck his letter jacket in his father's trunk for safekeeping. When he returned, however, he discovered the jacket had been damaged by water. He was able to salvage only the letter and the patch.

Meanwhile, life went on. Wilson married his wife, Dixie, fathered two sons and managed to buckle down and earn an engineering degree at UK. Still, in the back of his mind was his desire to replace that treasured letter jacket.

Last year, Wilson talked with a former basketball teammate who suggested he contact Chuck Vaughn, director of the Big Maroon Club, a booster club for sports at Campbellsville University.

"He really wanted to find a replacement," Vaughn said.

Vaughn connected Wilson with H&W Sports Shop in Campbellsville, where Mitch Overstreet, the manager, took over.

Overstreet said the store deals with DeLong Sportswear in Iowa, where the letter jackets are made in America "from scratch."

Wilson called in the fall. The jacket cost $200, and Wilson estimates it probably would have been $20 or $25 back in the day. It would take three to four weeks for delivery.

Overstreet told Wilson to send him the letter and patch Wilson had saved all these years so they could be sewed on professionally. But there was no way Wilson was going to do that.

Yes, the items could be insured, Wilson said, but if they were lost, they couldn't be replaced.

"I put it on myself," Wilson said of the letter and patch. "I have my own sewing machine, and my mother was a seamstress.

"I had held onto them all these years, why take the chance?"

Wilson said he spoke with Overstreet to learn where the patch and letter should be positioned on the jacket, and applied them.

Since then, Wilson and the jacket have been virtually inseparable.

I have been sworn to secrecy about any size difference there might be between the original and replacement jackets.

"I talk to people who say they can't wear their jackets any more," Wilson said, laughing. "I tell them I can wear mine every day."

Campbellsville University Somerset graduates celebrate

Campbellsville University's 31 Somerset graduates celebrated May 10 with a program that told the graduates to "live life on purpose."

Dr. Jesse Correll, founder and chairman of the board for First Southern Bancorp Inc., told the graduates in criminal justice, early childhood education and social work to think about what they would want people to say about them when they are 80 years old.

Correll told the graduates debt is bad, saving is good, giving is fun and stuff is meaningless.

"Be careful, debt is bondage," he said. He praised the students for their endurance in their college studies. However, he said in life they will need just as much endurance and life will not get simpler. "Don't expect to have what your parents have right now," he said.

He urged the graduates to spend less than they make and save for what they want. "Let interest work for you and not against you," he said.

"Be quick to give and slow to spend," he said. "Giving is fun," Correll said.

"Learn to be content with what you have; stuff is meaningless."

"Who you are with is more important than what you are doing," he said. "All people are important; even if you just say 'hello' and smile."

Correll said it was great to see the partnership with CU and Somerset Community College and the entire Kentucky Community and Technical College System.

Dr. Michael V. Carter, president of CU, expressed thanks to the "great relationship we share with SCC."

"We appreciate the great hospitality," he said. "We gather here because of the students."

Smith becomes director of alumni relations

By Joan C. McKinney, editor

Paula Smith, who has been employed in the Office of Development at CU since January 2006, is the new director of alumni relations at CU.

"Paula is doing an outstanding job," Benji Kelly, vice president for development, said. "Her enthusiasm, dedication and commitment to Campbellsville's alumni will help take our alumni program to the next level."

"One of the best things I enjoy about my job is meeting our alumni," Smith said. "I bring great enthusiasm and energy as I try to undertake what I am doing."

In addition to keeping current addresses and other contact information for the database, Smith will help maintain individual alumni records.

"I will also help facilitate reunions and special events for the alumni. I look forward to keeping the alumni of CU informed and encouraging alumni to stay involved in the institution's future, no matter where they may go," she said.

If you are an alumnus, keep in contact with CU, and one way to do so is to update your information by calling 270-789-5216, writing to Paula Smith, UPO 784, 1 University Drive, Campbellsville, Ky. 42718 or emailing: pjsmith@campbellsville.edu.

Long-time trustee, Dr. J. Chester Badgett, dies at 96

By Joan C. McKinney, editor

One of the senior statesmen of Kentucky and Southern Baptist life, Dr. J. Chester Badgett, has died at the age of 96.

Badgett, a member of Campbellsville University's Board of Trustees at his death and for 42 years, died May 10 at Jewish Hospital in Louisville.

"On behalf of the entire Campbellsville University family, we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the family of Dr. J. Chester Badgett," Dr. Michael V. Carter, president of CU, said.

"Dr. Badgett was one of the 'great generation' of Southern Baptist and Kentucky Baptist leaders, and his more than three decades as the senior pastor of Campbellsville Baptist Church touched the lives of thousands of people across southern Kentucky and beyond," he said.

Carter called Badgett a "stalwart supporter of Campbellsville University" and a "key member of the CU Board of Trustees for many decades."

"His passion for evangelism and missions, advocacy of the Cooperative Program and leadership at all levels of our denomination are legendary across the Southern Baptist Convention and Kentucky Baptist Convention," Carter said.

Dr. Jay Conner, chair of the Board of Trustees, said it was "an honor and privilege" to serve with someone who had made such an indelible contribution to Campbellsville University.

Two other presidents of Campbellsville University, Dr. W.R. Davenport of Campbellsville and Dr. Kenneth W. Winters of Murray, Ky., also felt the loss of Badgett.

Davenport, president of CU from 1969 to 1988, said, "In Dr. Badgett, Campbellsville University has lost a stalwart supporter, a devoted trustee, a loyal friend and an uncompromising champion of our cause.

Winters, president of CU from 1996 to 1999, said, "I was saddened to hear of the passing of Dr. J. Chester Badgett. It would be hard to imagine anyone more dedicated to an institution and its mission than that of Dr. Badgett."

In addition to his service as a CU trustee, Badgett served as director of church relations. He was the author of the official History of Campbellsville University 1906-2006 book.

At the 2009 ceremony of the naming of the Badgett Academic Support Center, his son, Dr. Thomas Badgett, spoke on behalf of the Badgett family. He said family meal discussions consisted of two things: Campbellsville Baptist Church, where his father was a preacher at the time, and CU's campus. "We were nurtured by this campus," he said.

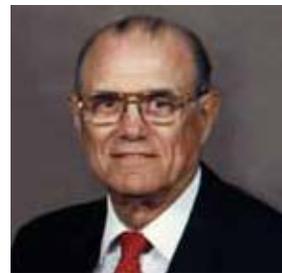

Badgett served as pastor of Campbellsville Baptist Church from 1950 until his retirement in July 1980. He authored Campbellsville Baptist Church, A Two-Hundred Year History 1791-1991.

The Badgett-Jones Scholarship at Campbellsville University was established in 2003. Scholarship recipient, Justin Watson of Campbellsville, who was a pastoral intern at Campbellsville Baptist Church, said Badgett was a "great man who was faithful all the way through to the end of his life."

"One of the things that stood out for me about Dr. Badgett was his heart for missions. He wanted to reach out to those who did not know Christ in the region, country and globally."

Badgett served on the board of New Orleans Theological Seminary and as past president of the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention and the Kentucky Baptist Convention.

He and his wife, the late Ruth W. Cloyd Badgett, who died Nov. 11, 2009, served several churches: Clear Creek Baptist Church in Woodford County, Little Mount Baptist Church in Spencer County, Utica Baptist Church in Daviess County, Beaver Dam Baptist Church in Ohio County, Kowloon Baptist Church in Hong Kong and Bethel Baptist Church in Caracas, Venezuela.

A Casey County native, he was a member of the Taylor County Ministerial Association and was the last surviving charter member of the Campbellsville Kiwanis Club.

A 1936 graduate of Georgetown College, he earned a master of theology in 1939 and doctorate in theology in 1946 from The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. He received an honorary doctor of divinity from Campbellsville College in 1980.

He is survived by two sons and one daughter: Tony Badgett and wife Priscilla, Ruth Ann Badgett Shaw and husband Bob of Frankfort and Dr. Thomas Badgett and wife Rachel of Louisville; five grandchildren: Dr. Joseph Russell Shaw and wife Caroline of Bloomington, Indiana, Jason Robert Shaw and wife Rachel of Frankfort, Jill Badgett Van Tassel and husband Joel of Lexington, Julie Badgett of Richmond, and Dr. Thomas Curry Badgett and wife Jeanne of Kensington, Maryland; seven great-grandchildren: Ian Shaw and Emma Shaw, Merritt Shaw and Sawyer Shaw, Elizabeth (Beppy) Badgett, Eleanor Ruth Badgett, and Lois Curry Badgett; one sister and brother-in-law, Sue Ella and Victor Gehlhausen of Stanford; and others.

Burial was in Brookside Cemetery. The family requests expressions of sympathy to be donations to the Badgett-Cloyd Scholarship Fund at Campbellsville University, the Annie Armstrong offering, Gideons or Campbellsville Baptist Church and may be made at Parrott and Ramsey Funeral Home in Campbellsville.

Campbellville University students perform servant leadership projects

By Elena Groholske, student news writer

Students in a Freshman Year Experience class learned about servant leadership through a project with Green River Ministries. The classes on this project gathered food items and worked on GRM's family room to make it more comfortable for visiting families. The area is now a play area for visiting children and their families. Games, stuffed animals, books and bookshelves were donated, and students also helped make "creative changes" to the room. (CU Photo by Phil Carlisle)

Campbellville University students enrolled in Freshman Year Experience classes were able to brainstorm and design service learning projects that were put into action this spring.

At the FYE Celebration Service, students shared their experiences and what they learned about servant leadership.

"We know how to serve, we need to know who to serve," said Andrea Nolley, freshman class president. "We need to push past our generation's stereotype, by serving them beyond our wildest dreams."

Logan Wolfe, a freshman from New Richmond, Ohio, said, "Service learning is about praising God. You can be the leader God calls you to be."

One FYE class collected supplies for animal shelters and a women's correctional facility.

"Providing supplies and showing support for these programs demonstrated to the students the reality that we are all God's children," said Dr. Jackie Sandifer, associate professor of criminal justice. "Just as Christ provides forgiveness and second chance for us, we are not to judge others who have made mistakes but to join Him in His work."

Other classes worked with after school programs, becoming mentors to the students and teaching sports.

One class worked on three different projects throughout the semester including renovations to a local church, and also raising money to sponsor 23 children in the slums of India for a full year of school.

Blair Bland, a freshman from Campbellville, Ky., worked on three different projects, including making birdseed feeders for a local nursing home.

"As I hung the birdfeeder I realized the importance of the project," said Bland. "An old woman watched me with a smile on her face. Something so little brought happiness."

Susan Blevins, assistant professor of education and student teaching coordinator, and Dr. Pat Cowherd, dean and professor of The J. Chester Porter-Maria L. Bouvette School of Business and Economics, had their classes working with Green River Ministries. The classes gathered food items and worked on GRM's family room to make it more comfortable for visiting families.

Other projects revolved around the importance of "going green" and recycling. One class campaigned for local businesses to agree to recycle and place recycling bins in their places of work, while another class planted trees and flowers for Earth Day with help from local leaders in the community and students from Campbellville Elementary School.

At the closing of the FYE Celebration Service, Dr. Michael V. Carter, president of the university, spoke on the connection between community service and Christ's call to servanthood.

"FIRST CLASS and FYE have been attempts to touch your heart," Carter said. "There are a lot of great people in the world, but if their heart hasn't been touched then they probably don't walk in the right way. The blending of heart and head is so important for your heart to be touched so you'll go the right way."

Campbellsville University launches new radio station with help from former NBC anchor

By Elena Groholske, student news writer

Campbellsville University's radio station, WLCU 88.7 FM is officially on-air. Reading the first on-air broadcast, are Dr. Michael V. Carter, right, president of CU; and Beverly Kirk, CEO of Bevkirk, International, LLC and featured speaker for the event. Campbellsville University has launched a new radio station, WLCU FM. The radio station broadcasts out of Campbellsville University's Broadcast Services at 203 West Broadway, Campbellsville, Ky.

The station call letters, WLCU stand for We Love Campbellsville University.

University students are heavily involved with WLCU, working hands on in the station as well as creating the segments and music programs that will air. Most of the students involved are enrolled in the university's first Introduction to Broadcasting class that is taught by Dr. H. Keith Spears, vice president for regional and professional education, and assisted by Jeannie Clark, TV-4 technician specialist, and Jimmie Wooley, director of broadcast services.

The radio station comes with the university's announcement of the offering of the new broadcast journalism major.

Campbellsville University now offers majors and minors in broadcasting and digital media, journalism and public relations. A minor is also offered in photojournalism. In addition, an area, essentially a major and minor combined, is available.

"As students learn the trade of broadcast journalism," Spears said, "the radio station will become their lab. Broadcast 1 will deal with producing public affairs and news, sports, public service announcements and other programming."

Campbellsville University hosted her 7th Annual Media Appreciation

Luncheon on March 31, where Beverly Kirk, a former NBC correspondent and the founder and CEO of BevKirk International LLC, a media-consulting and professional services agency, was the keynote speaker.

Around 150 local media, Campbellsville students, faculty and staff attended this year's luncheon.

"The Media Appreciation Luncheon is a chance for the university to thank the local media for all of their hard work as well as an opportunity for students to meet and network with those who have hands-on experience in the media," Joan McKinney, news and publications coordinator for Campbellsville University, said.

The media luncheon showcased Campbellsville University's new radio station WLCU 88.7 FM and its first on-air broadcast.

Kirk not only was the guest speaker but also "flipped the switch" to turn on WLCU, and was on hand to record the station's first live public service announcement.

Dr. Michael V. Carter, president of Campbellsville University, and Al Hardy, dean of academic support, helped Kirk to turn WLCU's switch.

WLCU airs contemporary Christian music, information segments, public service announcements and news and weather segments. Students in the broadcasting class have recorded PSAs that have already aired during the testing phase of the station.

"All programs will reflect the core values of the University" Wooley said. "The station will be a great tool for the broadcast major."

Campbellsville University is now the only private institution in the Commonwealth of Kentucky that has a FCC licensed TV and radio station.

Campbellsville University celebrates 15 years as a university

In the spring of 1996, the Campbellsville University Board of Trustees made an historic announcement.

On April 11 of that year, the Board of Trustees had voted to change the name of the institution from Campbellsville College to Campbellsville University. Just a few days later, the formal announcement of advancing to Campbellsville University was made in a public ceremony held on the campus. It was truly a historical and pivotal announcement, made in the institution's 90th year, that helped set the stage for the growth and momentum that we have enjoyed over the course of the past 15 years.

A little more than three years later on August 1, 1999, I became the new president of Campbellsville University. As I shared with the CU Board of Trustees and senior administrators at that time, others of us in Baptist higher education had observed the announcement those few years before and commented on the significance of the move.

In retrospect, it is apparent that this move to university status by then-President Dr. Ken Winters and the Board of Trustees, then chaired by John Chowning, was a significant step forward in laying the groundwork for what has been a decade and half of dramatic transformation of Campbellsville University. This move helped set the stage and served as a momentum builder that enhanced the tremendous progress that we have made over the years.

There are different ways by which to measure progress, and the progress we have made is the result of being faithful to God's direction and the historic mission of the university. It also results from the cooperative work by a dedicated Board of Trustees, faculty, staff, and coaches (as well as our alumni, various boards and councils, churches, and friends) who are working together to create a model community of learning and engagement for our students.

Our quest has been, and continues, to model Christian community, promote mutual respect and acceptance, create a dynamic learning environment, and to serve others as Christ taught – these are threads that run deep at Campbellsville University.

Over 17 facilities have been put in place since spring 1996, and significant renovations have been completed on 12 facilities. The main campus has more than doubled in size with the purchase of new properties.

CU's more than 10,000 alumni are assuming positions of leadership across the globe in a growing number of fields and professions. They are providing Christian servant leadership in a variety of fields.

In summary, these indicators of progress are the results of something more important. The people of CU, working together to create a dynamic Christian community where servant leadership is emphasized, are the true heart of what we are doing. We have been truly blessed by God, we have worked very hard with emphasis on others and the Christian mission of CU, and all of this is a foundation to build on as we move forward in our second century.

CU's commitment to being a Christ-centered community of learning, in the Baptist tradition, has never been stronger. The university team is committed to our Christian heritage and to our mission of preparing Christian servant leaders.

As we look to the future, we are thankful for the hard work of those who have gone before us over the past 105 years, and we pause to celebrate the successes of the past 15 years as a Christian university!

Thank you for your support, prayers, and good words as we move toward a bright and promising future.

Campbellsville University graduates largest class ever with over 500 students receiving diplomas in 2010-11 ceremonies

By Joan C. McKinney, editor

Campbellsville University graduated her largest class ever with over 500 students receiving diplomas over the weekend for the 2010-11 academic year.

A total of 517 students received degrees, pending completion of all academic requirements. There were 119 graduate student degrees awarded May 13 and 262 students receiving undergraduate degrees May 14. December's class consisted of 136 graduates. Dr. Michael V. Carter, president of Campbellsville University, said, "This is a very special day—a day that you as graduates and your family will long remember."

The Algernon Sydney Sullivan Awards were presented to Dr. James Jones, pastor of Pleasant Hill Baptist Church, Campbellsville, and a member of the CU Board of Trustees and Church Relations Council, and Micah Don Spicer of Wingo, Ky., who is Mr. Campbellsville University and was the CU Student Government Association president.

Dr. Kevin W. Cosby, president of Simmons College of Kentucky and pastor of St. Stephen Church in Louisville, was presented the honorary doctorate of humanities degree. Cosby was the undergraduate commencement speaker May 14 at Powell Athletic Center.

Cosby's address centered on the James Hall book, "Lost Island." He told the graduates life is about losing our "islands"—places in which we experience each part of our life—and moving from one "island" to another.

"Campbellsville University gave you wings," Cosby said. "Don't let anyone take away your wings. Fly into the orbit of God and his kingdom."

Dr. Bill Mackey, executive director of the Kentucky Baptist Convention, who is retiring, was presented the Campbellsville University Leadership Award at the graduate ceremony May 13 in Ransdell Chapel.

Mackey quoted from Philippians 1:9-11, encouraging passages which he said told the graduates God's purpose for their lives. He urged them to lead a Christian life and career and to grow in love for Jesus and one another.

Ches Fuller, a 2011 master of business administration degree recipient from Lexington, answered the president's charge at the May 13 ceremony.

"Go forth as a representative of this university and take what you've learned and make a difference in the world by sharing the love of Jesus Christ," Fuller said. In answering Carter's charge at the May 14 ceremony, LeAnn Stanfield Straley, president of the senior class, who received a double major in history and political science in three years, gave her fellow classmates three pieces of advice: "be true to yourself," "believe in yourself" and "carry what we have learned at Campbellsville University throughout our lives."

Co-valedictorians for the May 2011 class were: Matthew William Egbert of Madisonville, Ky.; Andrew Davis McNeill of Louisville, Tenn.; and Cory Mark Snyder of Campbellsville. Salutatorian for May 2011 was Adlee Faith Manion of Leitchfield, Ky.

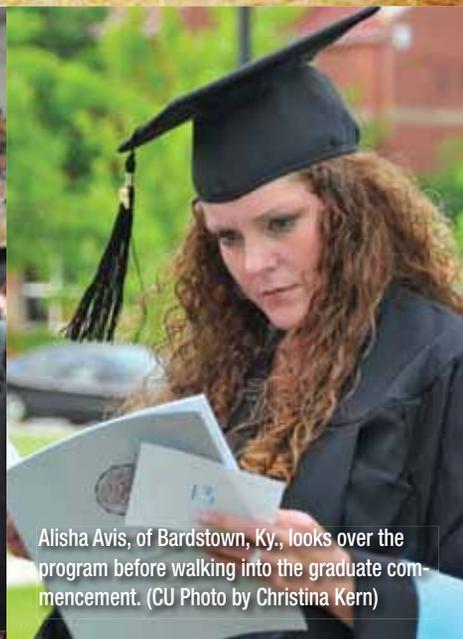

Valedictorian for December 2010 was Benjamin Wylder Randall of Versailles, Ky.; and salutatorian for December 2010 was Kyle Alexander Romines of Campbellsville.

Herman Hardesty, a 1958 graduate of CU, installed the alumni and urged them to stay in touch with their alma mater.

WBCA honors CU's Donna Wise with Lifetime Achievement Award

Donna Wise, the all-time winningest coach at Campbellsville University, officially joined the ranks of great women's basketball coaches in America in May when she was awarded the 2011 Jostens-Berenson Lifetime Achievement Award by the Women's Basketball Coaches Association (WBCA).

Wise was recognized with the honor during the WBCA Award Show at the Indianapolis Convention Center's Sagamore Ballroom.

The award is named in honor of the late Senda Berenson, who in her role as a physical education instructor at Smith College in Northampton, Mass., introduced "basketball" to her female gym students in 1892. This introduction marked the birth of the women's game, which occurred the year following basketball's invention by Dr. James Naismith in Springfield, Mass.

Previous winners include Margaret Wade, Delta State; Cathy Rush, Immaculata; and the late Sue Gunter, Louisiana State, who were premiere teams in the resurgence of women's basketball. The late Kay Yow, North Carolina State University, and current Tennessee Coach Pat Summit also are recipients.

"Looking at the list of previous award winners and their impact on women's basketball, I am humbled to be placed in that company," Wise said.

Wise spent 32 years on the sidelines at Campbellsville University, winning 661 games (661-283) with only Adolph Rupp, Ed Diddle and Denny Crum with more collegiate wins in Kentucky. Her titles and honors are numerous both athletically and civically.

"This is a great honor for Donna to receive from the Women's Basketball Coaches Association. It shows they respect her 32 years on the sideline, and the success she experienced," Rusty Hollingsworth, director of athletics, said.

Ballinger's Jersey hangs in Hall of Fame

By Richard RoBards, assistant to the sports information director

After a stellar career in which she was twice named NAIA Player of the Year, Whitney Ballinger's Lady Tiger Basketball uniform jersey is on display in the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame's Ring of Honor in Knoxville, Tenn.

"This is as much of an honor for our school as it is her," said Coach Ginger Colvin. "People passing through there (Hall of Fame) will catch a glimpse of our school and what Whitney has accomplished in her three short years here."

Ballinger was also two-time Mid-South Conference Player of the Year as well as the all-time leading Lady Tiger shot blocker. The Ring of Honor has become one of the most popular exhibits at the hall of fame, allowing fans to recognize the accomplishments of student-athletes for their achievements on the hardwood.

Ballinger scored 2,064 points (20 ppg) in her three-year Campbellsville career and pulled down 1,083 rebounds (10.5 rpg). Her scoring was third all-time in Lady Tiger history and her rebounds place her at fourth all-time. She also had 198 steals and 254 assists and a program-best 367 blocks. Off the court, she excelled in the classroom, as she was one of five players voted a Capital One Academic All-America First Team selection. The honor includes players from the NAIA, NCAA Division II and NCAA Division III.

Ballinger's jersey joins an elite group of over 100 that will hang in the ring that includes high school and college All-Americans from the 2010-11 season.

"We're thrilled that she's being honored," said Colvin, who also announced that Ballinger's number (43) will be retired.

Whitney Ballinger's Lady Tiger Basketball uniform jersey will be put on display in the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame's Ring of Honor in Knoxville, Tenn.

Campbellsville finished the 2010-11 season at 30-4 and made it to the Elite Eight of the NAIA National Tournament for the second year in a row.

CU wins second straight President's Cup

By Chris Megginson, sports information director

Campbellsville University has claimed its second straight Mid-South Conference President's Cup.

Campbellsville won the year-long competition with 111.5 points. University of the Cumberlands finished second with 104 points and Lindsey Wilson College finished third with 102.5 points.

The 7.5-point margin is the widest in the history of the trophy.

"It is exciting for our department and the university to win the President's Cup again this year," Rusty Hollingsworth, director of athletics, said. "We are blessed to have a dedicated coaching staff, hard working student-athletes and great support from our fans.

"To win this award in the MSC is not an easy task. This is, in my opinion, the most competitive conference in the NAIA.

"These things are not accomplished without the support of our president, board of trustees and administration. This is an award the entire campus community can celebrate."

Points are awarded based on the final regular season standings for each conference-sanctioned sport. The regular season champion in each sport receives 10 points; second place receives nine points, etc. At the conclusion of the season, the top six male and top six female team finishes for each institution generates the institution's overall totals and thus the MSC President Cup winner.

Campbellsville won or shared six different conference regular season championships during the 2010-11 season. The Tigers captured titles in baseball, women's basketball, women's tennis and wrestling while sharing regular season titles in women's golf and men's tennis.

Campbellsville also earned 10 points in men's and women's track and field for being the top finisher of the full-time members at the track and field championships.

CU claimed its first President's Cup in program history at the conclusion of the 2009-2010 season and is only the third institution to win the honor in back-to-back seasons. Georgetown College was the first to be a repeat winner in the spring of 2001 and 2002. University of the Cumberlands leads MSC members with seven first-place finishes.

Walker races to NCCAA national title in 400-meter dash

By Chris Megginson, sports information director

For the third straight year, Campbellsville University claimed a men's outdoor track and field individual national championship at the National Christian College Athletic Association (NCCAA) Championships May 6-7.

Only this time, instead of a possible three-peat by senior triple jumper Detrick Briggs, it was freshman sprinter Xavier Walker who took top prize at the meet at St. Francis University.

Walker raced his way to a national title in the 400-meter dash, giving the Tiger outdoor track and field program its third national championship, which is the most of any program in CU school history. CU's men's swimming had two individual NAIA champions in the late 1990s and Tiger wrestling has two individual NAIA national titles.

The Radcliff, Ky. native won the meet with a time of 49.22 seconds. He shaved a half second off his preliminary time to break the school record for the event by eight-tenths of a second. Cody Eubanks previously held the record with a time of 49.30 during the 2007 season.

Campbellsville collected 42 team points to finish sixth in the 15-team meet. Walker led the Tigers with 12 points, 10 from his national title and two from a seventh-place finish in the 200-meter dash. Dale Kerr was second in individual points with 10, as he finished third in the shot put and fifth in the discus.

Like most of the season, the Tigers collected most of their points (17) in the triple jump competition.

Briggs' two-year reign as NCCAA triple jump national champ fell about 10 inches short of a three-peat May 6. Briggs jumped 13.83 meters (45 feet, 4.5 inches), while Boyd Calen of Bethel University (Ind.) had a mark of 14.09 meters (46 feet, 2.75 inches). Randles followed Briggs in third place with a 13.71-meter jump, while Timmy Perdue was sixth with a mark of 13.14 meters.

Four coaches – more than 1,500 wins

By Richard RoBards, assistant to the sports information director

It's hard enough for one coach to reach a milestone, but Campbellsville University has had four coaches to push the envelope this year, helping four different programs accumulate more than 1,500 career wins.

Men's basketball coach Keith Adkins was the first at milestone attainment as he turned over the two-century mark in wins on Nov. 22, 2010 when his Tigers beat then-No. 10-ranked Union University on the road, 71-66.

"Oh man. That shows, as my dad used to say, every time he got to a milestone win...It means you've been around for a long time.' I'll use his quote," Adkins said at the time.

But he also credited his assistant coaches and talented players for the milestone, something that is universal in the coaching-to-a-milestone journey.

"I think it says a lot for them to have been committed for the time it has taken to achieve these milestone wins," said Rusty Hollingsworth, director of athletics. "Whether it be 100 wins in three seasons, or 900 in 21, this shows their commitment to the profession and the university."

Women's basketball coach Ginger Colvin picked up her 100th win on Feb. 15, 2011 when her Lady Tigers pummeled Oakland City University 93-48.

"The beauty of this is it's not my 100th win, it's ours together," Colvin said after the game. "This senior group was my first recruiting class, which I think is something to share with those kids. We've gone through these four years together," she said. "It's really nice to have, but we have bigger things in mind for sure."

On April 18, 2011 CU's self-described "ole plow mule" baseball coach, Beauford Sanders, used a 4-3 win over Shawnee State to record his 900th career win.

"Honestly and truthfully, I haven't really thought about 900," Sanders said at the time. "The big thing for us is playing better baseball and getting better at the plate. Today I was so proud that the guys started off poorly in early innings, but persevered and got a little bit better, and a little bit better. The most important thing is the team and how we're doing. I want the guys to feed off this."

Finally, on April 29, 2011 Lady Tiger softball coach Shannon Wathen turned the page on her 300th win when her team beat University of the Columbians 8-3 during the Mid-South Conference Tournament.

"I think this is a direct reflection on our alumni and the current players for their hard work and commitment," Wathen said. "It's exciting for our program, and especially for all the young ladies who have played with me the past 8-10 years.

"I know the wins are by my name, but none of this could have happened without the players and all the assistant coaches I've had through the years."

WINTER REWIND

The Lady Tiger basketball team completed a 30-4 season with the program's first consecutive appearances in the NAIA Quarterfinals. CU captured the Mid-South Conference regular season and tournament championships, as the CU senior class finished with the most wins of any senior class in program history (108). Three-time All-American Whitney Ballinger, a senior from Carrollton, Ky., was named the MSC and NAIA Player of the Year for the second straight year, while Courtney Clifton, a sophomore transfer from Lexington, Ky., was also named an All-American.

Tiger basketball finished the season with a 17-16 record and fifth-place finish in the MSC. Shawn Savage passed the 1,000 career point mark for the Tigers and finished his career among the top in 3-pointers made, 3-pointers attempted and games played. CU competed in its first National Christian College Athletic Association (NCCAA) Tournament, finishing runner-up in the Mid-East Region.

Wrestling tied its best national finish in program history with five All-Americans and a seventh-place finish at the national championship. Johnny Papesh nearly claimed the program's third NAIA national champion, finishing runner-up in his class, while senior David Clemens became the first Tiger to place in the national tournament each of his four years. CU also posted its best NAIA National Duals finish in program history, finishing fourth. It also went on to win its second-straight MSC championship, as Franky James was named MSC Coach of the Year.

During the second season of Tiger and Lady Tiger bowling, both teams participated in the inaugural NAIA Bowling Invitational. The Lady Tigers also advanced to the first US Bowling Congress Sectional, finishing 12th of the 16 teams and No. 41 among all teams in the nation (NAIA to NCAA Division I).

Women's swimming earned three Top 16 finishes in the NAIA National Championships.

A LOOK BACK AT SPRING

Lady Tiger softball rallied from a 4-18 start to finish the year 33-25 and runner-up in the Mid-South Conference Tournament. The result was an at-large bid to the National Christian College Athletic Association (NCCAA) National Tournament. Bailey Dillender, Alex Jane Clemmons and Jennifer England earned All-Conference honors with Dillender repeating her title as MSC Player of the Year.

Tiger baseball won its third straight MSC regular season championship and returned to the NAIA National Tournament for the third straight year. The Tigers finished the season with a 32-21 record. Beauford Sanders was named the MSC Coach of the Year, while junior Michael McBride was named the MSC Pitcher of the Year after posting a 1.01 ERA through the regular season. He was joined on the All-Conference team by senior outfielder Jameel Ziadeh. Michael Durham won the MSC Gold Glove Award for centerfield.

Lady Tiger golf fell short of claiming sole possession of the MSC regular season title, but settled for a three-way tie of the championship for the second straight year. Lauren Goodin, who nailed a hole-in-one during practice in April, was named All-Conference along with Kaela Smith and Katie White. Tiger golf finished fourth in the conference.

Lady Tiger and Tiger tennis each won their first MSC regular season titles in April. The Lady Tigers went 5-0 in MSC play as Tanya Murtagh was named Freshman of the Year and was joined on the All-Conference team for singles and doubles action by Anita Henestroza. The Tigers finished in a three-way tie for the championship with All-Conference honors going to Carlos Anton, Pablo Numbela and Zac Malyon. Kyle Caven was named MSC Coach of the Year for both teams.

The start of indoor track and field for the first time in school history helped the men's and women's outdoor track and field teams post their best seasons in program history. Both teams finished second in the MSC Championships behind Shorter University, but first among all full-time MSC schools. MSC titles were captured by Detrick Briggs (men's triple jump), Kotey Crowe (women's pole vault) and Tiana Benjamin (women's javelin). P.J. Randles was named MSC Men's Track and Field Athlete of the Year and Freshman of the Year. Both teams finished sixth in the NCCAA National Championships.

Russ Mobley leaves 'indelible mark' on Campbellsville University

Russ Mobley left an indelible mark on Campbellsville University and especially the theater department.

Mobley, who taught drama at CU from 1971 to 2005, was honored with the naming of the Russ Mobley Theater in the Alumni Building at a ceremony that marked the unveiling of the name, a luncheon reunion of the Harlequins and performances in skits and song April 30. Dr. Michael V. Carter, president, said Mobley's connection with the community and CU's theater department was an important interaction – even with University of Kentucky's president, Lee Todd, who drove his daughter down for productions and who said they would be forever grateful for Mobley's teaching his daughter.

"Russ Mobley's dedication speaks to the spirit of why we are here," Carter said. "Russ leaves a great legacy in this place," he said as he spoke before the name was unveiled.

Many persons spoke of Mobley's mentorship of them, and many told funny stories about what happened on and off the stage.

"It's a great honor," Mobley said. "I feel very privileged to have taught here as long as I did, and I'm honored that they think highly enough of me to rename the theater."

During his 34-year tenure at CU, Mobley, 77, directed more than 100 theater performances, his first being Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat.

After retiring from Campbellsville University, Mobley served as state representative for the 51st congressional district for four terms from 2001 to 2009.

CU students use basketball to promote good behavior, team building and the gospel among Lincoln Village residents

Camp time around Campbellsville University is in full swing. But before campers from across the Commonwealth and Southeast come to campus for Christian or sports camps, one class worked recently to combine the two elements in a project.

Dr. Ted Taylor's Christian coaching class hosted a one-day basketball clinic that also featured an opportunity for a gospel presentation. Only the campers were not paying their way to the camp with money, but good behavior.

Student Mike Smith, 54, is in charge of recreation at a boys' detention center, Lincoln Village, in Hardin County, Ky. A student in Taylor's class, Smith decided to bring some of his boys to a Campbellsville basketball game in February and the clinic idea was born.

"I wanted our class to know how much it would take to pull off an event like this from getting the event and working out the details," Taylor said.

"To make a week means you have to say 'Yes, Sir,' 'Yes, Ma'am,' go to bed on time, don't talk back, you know all of the skills we want our youth to have," Smith said. "You can imagine they struggle with that. Some of them we have as long as a year."

Kristi Ensminger, former CU Lady Tiger and graduate assistant for Taylor, and fellow Lady Tigers Courtney Danis and Whitney Ballinger helped teach skills as well as former Tiger junior varsity player Logan Hazelwood.

Ensminger led the group through defensive drills, while Danis taught jump shots and Ballinger taught rebounds and passing. Hazelwood worked on dribbling.

The rough background was something at least one of Smith's classmates could relate to. CU senior football player Jeffrey Demary of Columbia, S.C. was in full coach mode with the boys.

"I can relate to some of these kids," Demary said. "Growing up, I had been through some of the stuff they've been through. By talking with them, it shows them where I am today and where they can be at."

The boys were presented the gospel over lunch.

Hazelwood, a senior pastoral ministries major from Harrodsburg, Ky., gave the lunchtime message.

"It's cool to be able to see how the skills God gave me open up so much to build relationships and advance the gospel," Hazelwood said.

Smith said, "It was great for us. If the university is good with it, we'd come back. I've been here a year and a half now and (the university's) been really good to me."

Taylor said, "It's a win-win for us and them, and it fits within our mission of what we're doing here at Campbellsville University."

Big hat, small hat, pink hat, white hat. Campbellsville University's Advancement Board raised money for the scholarship fund through a Hat Preview event held at the home of Betty and Chester Porter in Mount Washington, Ky. March 26.

Hat designers Glenda Patterson ('69) of GL Patterson Designs and Denita Cherry of Denita Cherry Designs donated 30 percent of the hat sales and orders toward CU's Scholarship Fund. Approximately $1,000 was raised through hat sales, orders and the entry fee.

Derby hats were modeled by CU student ambassadors Holly Godbey of Eubank, Ky.; Rachel Hines of Bethelridge, Ky.; and Sarah Rose of Dry Ridge, Ky. Laura Mann, a 2010 graduate of CU, also helped with the event.

Sara Curry, chairperson of the Advancement Board, said, "We were extremely pleased with the enthusiasm of our guests and the creativity of our hat designers."

Gwinn Hahn, chair of this year's Derby Rose Gala, said, "We are so grateful to Betty and Chester Porter for opening their home for our first Derby Hat Preview and Sale. Their generosity enriches our scholarship effort. In addition, this event is made possible through the beautiful creations of the hat designers, Glenda Patterson and Denita Cherry. We are most appreciative for their financial support of our scholarship effort. Lastly, our thanks to Campbellsville University's Office of Development and the wonderful students to whom our scholarship fundraising is dedicated."

Another fashion hat sale in Campbellsville is being planned.

Greg Vaughn, 12th Man Club long-time president, dies

By Richard RoBards, assistant to the sports information director

Greg Vaughn was a Campbellsville University football fan until the very end. Vaughn attended the April 30 Spring Game and two days later he died from a battle with cancer.

"We went to the game, and he was really sick," said his brother, Chuck Vaughn, Campbellsville University's director of the Big Maroon Club, "but he wanted to see the team. We sat in the parking lot and watched the first half."

Chuck Vaughn said his brother followed football religiously, especially at Campbellsville High where he played and then at CU when its program restarted in 1987.

"If nothing else, Greg was loyal," Chuck Vaughn said. "If he got into something and loved it, there was no half commitment. I guess that was his connect point. He loved football, thus he loved Campbellsville University football."

Greg Vaughn, 63, led a group called the 12th Man Club, and was described as a lifesaver by present coach Perry Thomas. Former coach, Jim Deaton, said Vaughn was a supporter of the first degree.

Ironically, the 12th Man Club is celebrating its 12th year of existence this year.

"He meant so much to our program," Thomas said. "He and Miss Patty (Greg's wife who works in the CU Office of Student Services) took a lot of our kids in... put an arm around them."

That commitment to the individual as much as the team was a driving force for Greg Vaughn to make regular trips to away games, no matter the distance.

"I can count on one hand the number of road games he missed," Chuck said.

"The enjoyment he got from helping the kids and meeting the parents is unmatched," said Deaton, who coached CU football from 2005 to 2007. "He became a friend to the players and the parents. His presence will be sadly missed."

The Dave Fryrear 12th Man Club has only known one president—Greg Vaughn.

Vaughn and former Fighting Tiger offensive coordinator Dave Fryrear (after whom the club is named), were neighbors before Fryrear died in 1999. Vaughn said the two of them were standing in the street one night when Fryrear planted a seed that Vaughn nurtured and cultivated.

"Coaches have so many other important things to do that our mission is to get the recruits out of their hair for awhile and somewhere where we can answer questions—whether it be about the school or the community," Vaughn said in a story published prior to the season.

The club's membership is diverse—diverse enough that just about any question a recruit might ask can be answered by a game-day host. And Greg made himself available for much of that.

"He would get frustrated sometimes that not everybody shared his passion," Chuck said. "He just had a knack for making a connection with players and staying in touch."

In honor of Vaughn's hard work, the institution is making plans to rename the 12th Man Club Pavilion—the Greg Vaughn 12th Man Club Pavilion. The dedication will take place at the Tigers' first football game of the fall Thursday, Sept. 1 at 7 p.m. against Union College.

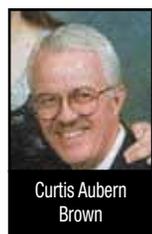

It's a fitting tribute to the club's president in both life and death.

Alumni Spotlight

Name: Debby Hazelip Duda

Age: 53

Year graduated from CU and major: Dec. 1982

Major: Music Education

Job Title: Elementary Music Teacher K-5th grades
G.C. Burkhead Elem. / Hardin Co Schools

How long at job?

28 years

How has serving in your present position been helpful to you?

My position has allowed me to meet so many families through the years and God has allowed me the privilege to share Christ's love both in the school and out.

What was your greatest moment at CU?

I've had some great times at CU, but two of my favorites were going on a Spring Break mission trip w/ Deann Clark and Sylvia Morris my first year there. I also travelled with the Campbellsville Singers for two years. The many friends I made have led to some lifetime friendships.

You are successful because ...

... I had two wonderful parents who taught me by example that the most important tasks in life are to "love God" and "love people." If those two things guide my choices then I will always be in the center of God's will for my life.

If I weren't in my current position, I'd be ...

... (not sure about an answer for this one). I will actually be retiring next year. My husband and I hope to travel but we would also like to do short-term mission trips. I will continue to serve the Lord wherever He leads.

For fun, I ...

... play volleyball for my church team. I also enjoy planning vacation trips and of course going on them!

Where do you volunteer your time? I play instruments on my church worship team; I assist the Youth Worship team and serve as a small group leader with the high school girls. I've also accompanied the youth group on many trips.

I also volunteer with several activities at the high school where my children have attended. And I serve as the President for C.U.'s very first Alumni Chapter for Hardin/Lane Co.

Before I die, I want to be as faithful as possible to serve the Lord and allow Him to use me to reach and lead many to know Christ and to be His disciples.
