Ransdells make lead gift toward University chapel

President's Report

December 2002

Slightly more than three years ago while making our first visit to Campbellsville University, my wife Debbie and I drove through the campus and walked its tree-lined sidewalks, greeted along the way by warm, smiling faculty and students. After we had toured nearly every facility, it immediately struck me that Campbellsville University had no formal facility to hold her corporate worship services. The nearly century old institution was in need of a chapel.

All of us pray for many things--peace in troubled times, food and shelter for the hungry and homeless, healthy and prosperous lives, successful careers, and safety of our children. These, too, are part of my daily prayers. I must admit, though, I began earnestly praying that God would somehow, someday bring to Campbellsville University an individual or family whose heart burned with the same desire as mine and others on our campus to fund the construction of a new chapel facility where our university community could praise and worship God.

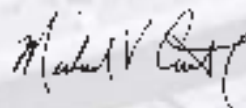

For the past several years, Campbellsville University's continuous enrollment growth has forced us to conduct chapel services in the gymnasium of the Powell Athletic Center. Although we can worship God no matter the condition or location of our surroundings, we placed as the top priority the construction of a chapel.

After much prayer, God answered us by sending Louisville trustee George Ransdell and his wife, Marie. This godly couple recently announced their intention to provide a $1 million lead gift toward the construction of what will be known as The George W. and Marie T. Ransdell Chapel.

The heart of a Christian university is its chapel. The heart of George and Marie Ransdell is and has always been to serve God through faithfulness and obedience.

As we are called to provide an exceptional Christian-focused education to our 1,800 plus students, the Ransdells were called to fund a facility where the university community can always reflect, praise and worship God on this campus until His return.

George and Marie Ramsdell never sought fame and fortune--they only sought to be obedient to God's calling.

'God gave us this money a dollar at a time'

BY MARC C. WHITT, EDITOR

George and Marie Ransdell never sought fame and fortune--they only sought to be obedient to God's calling.

But through their obedience they have received recognition, at least within Campbellsville University circles, as the Louisville, Ky. couple has contributed the largest capital gift in the history of the university--a $1 million lead gift that will go toward the construction of what will become the George W. and Marie T. Ransdell Chapel.

"God gave us this money a dollar at a time," said George Ransdell, a long-time trustee at CU and a successful, retired distributor of medical and surgical products. "We now wish to give a portion back for the cause of Christian higher education and to this institution we so dearly love."

Ransdell, a native of LaGrange, Ky., said that even though he and Marie never attended college, they did attend and learn through the "School of Hard Knocks."

"We had to work for every penny we earned," he said. "Yes, at times, life was tough. But hard times can make one grow quicker. However, through it all, God has always been faithful to our family and us."

Introduced to Campbellsville University in the early 1970s by then-president Dr. Randy Davenport, George and Marie Ransdell's love affair with the institution began. His first term as a trustee began in 1970, and he continues in this role to this day.

"We simply love Campbellsville," he said. "She stands for everything Baptists seek for their colleges to be: faithful to the cause of Christian education, sensitive to God's calling, willing to serve and to make life better for the students, all the while never forgetting her historic, Baptist roots."

"We have been excited to see Campbellsville University's constant growth. When we first arrived on the scene, Campbellsville was largely enrolling students from Campbellsville

Ransdell said that he and his wife were "inspired to give" to the chapel project because of Campbellsville University's unswerving devotion to its Christian mission and to the fact that "the students were in need of a place of spiritual dignity to worship on campus throughout the week."

From the time the Ransdells became involved with CU, they had witnessed the student body grow from less than 900 students to an enrollment of 1,811 this year. As a result of this growth, the students were forced to change locations of their chapel and convocation services numerous times during the past and current decade. For the past five years, the university community has conducted its weekly chapel and convocation service in the J.K. Powell Athletic Center Gymnasium.

"We have made this gift to Campbellsville University not to receive credit, but to give credit to God's glorious love for us all," said Ransdell. "None of us, not even Marie and me and our children and grandchildren, would be anything had it not been for the saving grace of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. It is imperative that each one of us, during this lifetime, takes a stand for good and for God's plan of salvation," Ephesians 2:8-9.

"This gift toward the construction of a much-needed chapel is our one way of taking that stand. Marie and I want those who come to the city of Campbellsville and then onto this campus to know that Christ is at its very center, its heart." ❁ and Taylor County. Today, students from many parts of Kentucky, the nation and the world are attending this great Christian university. It just thrills our hearts.

Marie and George Ransdell

"For many years, Marie and I have been impressed by the excellence and Christian commitment of Campbellsville's faculty and staff and of the three presidents with whom I have served as a trustee--Randy Davenport, Ken Winters, and now, Mike Carter. These three are Godly leaders. I can truly say that God does, indeed, have his hand on this institution."

$1 million chapel gift is a 'gift of gratitude to God'

By DR. WALTER JACKSON, DEAN OF THE SCHOOL THEOLOGY

The Campbellsville University family always finds a place to worship God, to witness for Jesus Christ, and listen to the guidance of the Holy Spirit; but we have never praised the Lord in our own chapel.

For 96 years we have lifted our petitions heavenward asking for our own house of worship. We have prayed without shame for some dear Christian stewards to step forward to help us. At times, we believed our prayers had been "locked out" by some celestial software glitch, out of sight and hearing of our great Lord God.

Now, that is a thing of the past, and we give thanks to God for George and Marie Ransdell. We're thrilled with their magnificent and generous leading gift. It is a giant step toward our own University Chapel. Surely on or before our 100th anniversary in 2006 we will lift our voices in prayer and praise from within our own University sanctuary dedicated to the worship of God. In George Ransdell's own words, he and Marie "earned their wealth one dollar at a time," and their generosity toward the university at this time is "a gift of gratitude to God."

For Campbellsville University, our chapel will provide so many things. The entire University family can sit together in one room. The functional, family worship space will strengthen and enrich the weekly sharing of the spiritual ties that already bind us together. In that place, we can make and experience great Christian music and lift our praise to the Lord.

We will experience religious drama and possess a place for our dedicated Christian scholars, technicians, scientists and arts practitioners to share their research and studies of the created order and the interactions of our human families. There we will also listen to ministers of the gospel proclaim the unsearchable riches of God's love and grace.

With hopeful anticipation, the Christian Studies faculty yearns for a connecting School of Theology building. It will be designed for the teaching and learning of Biblical, theological and historical truths. It will enable the development of ministry gifts and competencies for the churches and the market places of the 21st and future centuries.

Together, chapel and school will serve as a workshop for ministers committed to the service of God and all the families of heaven and earth.

We are well on our way, but we have some distance yet to go. Now we travel with renewed hope. Already others have begun to add gifts to the treasury for the building of this chapel and School of Theology building. May their numbers grow. But we will always remember those who launched us on the way. ♣

CU joins leading Southern colleges and universities in presenting Sullivan Awards

By MARC C. WHITT, EDITOR

Campbellsville University is joining a select group of Southern colleges and universities to award the prestigious Algernon Sydney Sullivan and Mary Mildred Sullivan Awards.

The Sullivan Awards, one to be presented to a graduating senior and one to an adult member of the university's community, are in recognition of their spiritual qualities, practically applied to daily living, as distinct from high scholarship, athletic achievement, success in business, professional ability, political leadership, or mere worldly prominence in any calling.

The Sullivan Awards have been presented each year by 50 Southern institutions such as the University of Virginia, William and Mary College, Washington & Lee University, University of the South, Davidson College and the University of North Carolina.

According to The Sullivan Foundation, these colleges and universities perceive the values affirmed by the Sullivan Awards to be representative of fundamental values of their institutions. Typically, the Sullivan Awards at these selected institutions receive prominence at commencement and/or honors convocations. ♣

Nevalyn Moore wins outstanding faculty award

By JOAN C. MCKINNEY, MANAGING EDITOR

Nevalyn Price Moore was never the type of student who won awards in school.

She won music competitions because she worked hard, practicing piano for five hours a day because she knew that's what it would take to win. She did whatever work was necessary to win at other non-music competitions.

But this year has been her year.

Moore, who has taught at Campbellsville University since 1980, was recently presented the Campbellsville University Academic Excellence Award for non-tenured faculty given by the University's Board of Advisors. She was also selected as the 2002 Kentucky Music Educators Association College/University Teacher of the Year.

"I honestly thought I'd work my entire career without being singled out for something like this," she said. "I love my job. For me, that really IS enough, but recognition sure is nice."

As an assistant professor of music at CU and mother of five children, Moore said she could not have done all the many activities in which she's involved without the help of her "good guy" husband, Dr. Jim Moore, professor of music at CU.

Moore goes on two tours each year, one with the CU Handbell Choir, which she directs, and one with the Kentucky Baptist All-State Youth Choir. Dr. Moore stayed home with their five children.

The Moores recently celebrated their 32nd wedding anniversary, and they now have a grandson, Sammy McCarty, who was 18-months-old in October.

Moore is proud of her husband, who was 1995 Composer of the Year for the Kentucky Music Teachers Association. He had a commissioned work performed at the University of Kentucky for the KMTA Convention. In addition, Jim was the 1988 recipient of the Composers Grant awarded by the Kentucky Arts Council.

The couple presents performances of folk music, combining singing with hammer dulcimer, Appalachian dulcimer, guitar and penny whistle.

A native of Mississippi, Moore teaches organ, handbells, piano and music lecture courses, directs the Campbellsville University Handbell Choir and serves as staff accompanist and university organist.

Moore's activities include serving as a church musician. She is a volunteer choir member at Campbellsville Baptist Church where she also directs the Adult Handbell Choir. Moore has served as organist/handbell coordinator at St. Matthew's Baptist Church in Louisville, staff organist at Lexington Avenue Baptist Church in Danville and as organist for churches in Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Tennessee and other churches in Kentucky.

She was accompanist for the 2001 Kentucky Baptist All-State Youth Choir and performed in Europe during the summer of 2002 as accompanist for the Kentucky Baptist Women's Chorale.

In the fall of 1999 and again in 2001, Moore was named KMEA Fourth District College/University Teacher of the Year. She was selected for the Bicentennial Edition of "Who's Who of American Women" in 2000 and for "Who's Who in America" in 2002.

Moore is frequently called upon to present keyboard and handbell workshops and serves as an adjudicator for festivals and competitions. She was the guest conductor for the 2001 Kentucky Baptist Ring and Share and has performed or presented lectures at state, regional and national music conventions.

She is a member of the American Guild of Organists, the American Guild of English Handbell Ringers, Music Teachers National Association, Kentucky Music Educators Association, Kentucky Music Teachers Association, Central Kentucky Music Teachers Association, Kentucky Baptist Music Conference and Kentucky Baptist Women's Chorale.

Moore received a bachelor of arts in music from Judson College in Alabama and a master of music in organ performance from the University of Mississippi. In addition, she has studied at Florida State University, The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville and Westminster Choir College.

The non-tenured faculty award recognizes a high standard of excellence and performance in the classroom and community while fulfilling the goals of the university. Roy Rich, chair of the CU Board of Advisors, presented Moore with a $1,000 stipend plus a plaque that will be displayed in CU's Montgomery Library.

Moore and her husband have five children, Bonnie McCarty, mother of Sammy; and Chris, Brian, Jenny Katie and Matthew Moore. ★

‘Anticipate the future with courage’ as CU supporters challenged

By MARC C. WHITT, EDITOR

“I believe the role of Campbellsville University and others of its kind will be so important in the 21st century that if these institutions did not exist today, there would be justification for creating them substantially as they are,” said University of Richmond (Va.) Chancellor E. Bruce Heilman, who challenged a Student Activities Center filled with Campbellsville University supporters at the annual President's Club Dinner.

The President's Club is a donor society whose members have contributed a minimum annual gift of $1,000 for Campbellsville University.

Heilman, a 1948 CU alumnus who currently serves on the Board of Trustees, served as the dinner's keynote speaker.

“These private, Christian institutions preserve and perpetuate the foundations of our faith,” he said. “They embody the commitment to values on which our country was established.

They encourage family life, ethical behavior, good character and other human qualities which have been the backbone of our culture throughout history.”

Heilman, recognized among America's 100 best college presidents, said that CU has a special place as an example for other private Christian institutions to follow.

“While some have maintained a limited commitment to the characteristics which have defined them, Campbellsville has taken seriously its role in the preservation of the eternal virtues which have helped to define its program and environment. It has not allowed fads of the moment to erode the values it holds dear. The examples which inspired me 54 years ago still exist today,” Heilman said. 🍁

A Supplement to the Campbellsvillian

Are you tired of the stock market?

BY ALAN MEDDERS, VICE PRESIDENT FOR DEVELOPMENT

Last fall in this article, I shared about the timeliness and unique opportunities that a Charitable Gift Annuity affords individuals as a giving option. It would have been difficult to imagine that the economy, interest rates, stock market, and consumer confidence would continue to be a primary focus one year later.

However, this has again created a wonderful, if not even better, opportunity to support charitable and institutional interests through a Charitable Gift Annuity. Why is making a gift through a Charitable Gift Annuity so advantageous at this time? First, returns on investments are so low. A Charitable Gift Annuity provides a fixed dollar return to the donor/s for life, no matter what is happening in other economic indicators. Second, the IRS discount rate is at an all-time low. That means the donor/s will receive the greatest amount of charitable deduction and the highest return on a Charitable Gift Annuity in history.

Following last year's article, several took advantage of the benefits of a Charitable Gift Annuity. If you have a low yielding stock or bond and a heart to support Baptist higher education, a Charitable Gift Annuity may be the right gift at the right time for you!

A Charitable Gift Annuity is a contract between you and Campbellsville University. You make a gift of cash or securities in exchange for a guaranteed, fixed income each year for the rest of your life.

A gift annuity for the benefit of Campbellsville University will provide you five benefits:

1. Receive the Satisfaction of Impacting Campbellsville University's Future.

You can impact Campbellsville University's future by partnering with the University through the creation of a gift annuity.

2. Receive a Charitable Income Tax Deduction.

The Internal Revenue Service considers a large part of what you transfer for a gift annuity as a charitable gift. This deduction is immediately available to offset taxes you may owe on other income. Your deduction may be used in the year of your gift to offset as much as 50% of your adjusted gross income for cash gifts and as much as 30% of your adjusted gross income for gifts of appreciated assets. Any portion of your deduction you are unable to use in the first year can be carried forward and used in future years--up to a maximum of five additional years.

3. Receive Guaranteed Income Payments for Life.

Your income payments are fixed the day you fund your gift annuity and will never change.

These payments continue as long as you live, and you can add a survivor beneficiary to receive the same benefits if you desire.

4. Receive Tax-Free Income.

Part of each payment you receive is considered a tax-free return of principal that can effectively increase your rate of return.

5. Receive Capital Gains Tax Savings.

If you fund a gift annuity with appreciated assets, you will avoid the immediate capital gains tax on part of the appreciation in the asset. The remaining capital gain will be prorated over your life expectancy.

EXAMPLE:

A '61 alumnus of Campbellsville College, Mary Smith is now 65 years old and has retired from the local high school, where she taught music for 38 years. Mary credits Campbellsville with giving her a wonderful education and preparing her for her career, and she remains involved with the University. Five years ago, she established an endowed scholarship fund for students pursuing a degree in music education. Mary wants to make additional gifts to her endowed scholarship fund, but she no longer has the disposable income. However, she learned she can make a gift, while still providing income for herself during her lifetime, through a charitable gift annuity agreement. Mary used funds from a $25,000 certificate of deposit that had just matured to fund the gift annuity. Based on her age, Mary will receive $1,675 each year (6.7%) for the rest of her life. Establishing a gift annuity allowed Mary to increase her income from the 5% she was earning on her CD. Another benefit to Mary is that $1,018 of each annuity payment is tax-free.

In addition to her lifetime income, Mary also received a charitable income tax deduction of $4,738. Mary is pleased with the tax and financial benefits her gift annuity is providing but is most pleased that her money will be used to instill a love for music in generations of students to come. At her death the remainder of the annuity will be placed in her endowed scholarship fund.

This example is for one individual; however, charitable gift annuities can benefit two individuals. Contact the Office of Development for Two Life Rates.

Helping people is passion for O.D. and Bessie Hawkins

By JOSEPH D.W. FOSTER, DIRECTOR OF DEVELOPMENT AND GENERAL COUNSEL

Helping people obtain a Christ-centered quality education while developing exceptional personal character has long been a passionate endeavor of O.D. and Bessie Hawkins.

The first involvement of Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins, residents of Owenton, Ky., with then-Campbellsville College was helping to send young pastors in north central Kentucky to college so they could go on to pursue seminary degrees.

It was not until several years later that Hawkins was appointed by the Kentucky Baptist Convention to serve on Campbellsville University's Board of Trustees, a position at which he continues to serve.

While the Hawkinses' commitment to higher education has always been strong, their commitment to Campbellsville University was solidified by one single event in the late 1980s.

Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins were passing through the region and decided to drive through Campbellsville and spend some time touring the campus.

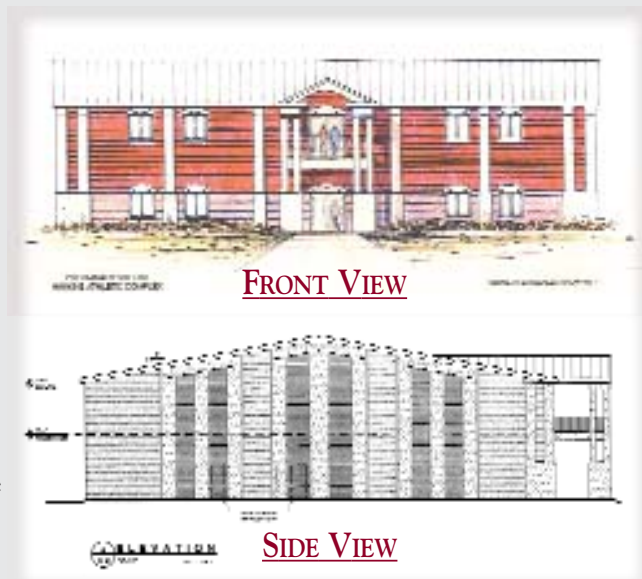

While on campus, the Hawkinses noticed a bus unloading in front of the men's residence hall. Hawkins recalled, "The young men were dressed in shirts and ties and very well mannered." The last gentleman off the bus, dressed in coat and tie, approached the Hawkinses and introduced himself as Ron Finley, head football coach at CU.

They recalled, "Coach Finley explained that the young men were members of the Campbellsville University Fighting Tiger Football Team, and they were returning from church. We knew that this was the caliber of program that we wanted to support."

True to their word, the Hawkinses have faithfully supported Campbellsville University, the athletics program and, specifically, the Fighting Tiger Football Team. Likewise, the couple has established an endowed scholarship which benefits students from north central Kentucky.

In addition, they have, in their words, "Given as God has given to them" so as to ensure that the University student athletes have quality facilities in which to learn, practice and compete.

The Hawkinses' sacrificial support of Tiger athletics, coupled with their making of a lead gift toward the construction of the project, has resulted in Campbellsville University's Board of Trustees recent naming of the Hawkins Athletic Complex for which construction is expected to begin in early 2003.

Of particular interest, the Hawkinses have made several gifts in the form of charitable gift annuities. Charitable gift annuities have allowed the Hawkinses to make a tremendous investment in the lives of CU students. Planned gifts in the form of charitable gift annuities have allowed the Hawkinses to retain some financial return on their investment, as well as allowing a significant personal return, that being the enrichment of the lives of countless student athletes.

Hawkins said, "Sports is not and should not be first in a person's life. We hope our gifts have and will continue to create an environment where student athletes learn the importance of strength of character and the value of Christian service."

Campbellsville University greatly appreciates the sacrificial support of O.D. and Bessie Hawkins, as well as our many other donors, and specifically appreciates their willingness to make gifts in the form of charitable gift annuities which, while allowing some return to the donor, make a tremendous difference in the lives of countless University students. 🍁

U.S. News & World Report taps CU ninth consecutive year

By MARC C. WHITT, EDITOR

For the ninth consecutive year, Campbellsville University has been named to U.S. News & World Report's "America's Best Colleges" issue.

Campbellsville is specifically recognized among the best 64 master's degree granting universities in the South. Other institutions noted alongside Campbellsville University included Auburn University-Montgomery, Pfeiffer University, Northern Kentucky University, Morehead State University, Arkansas State University and Charleston Southern University.

"This ranking is truly a tribute to the excellence of Campbellsville University's faculty and her students," said CU President Michael V. Carter. "For nine years in a row, U.S. News & World Report has recognized our rigorous academic program as well as our affordability which continues to be ranked well below the national level for private colleges and universities.

"Alumni of Campbellsville University, too, should be pleased with this announcement as this enhances the value of their diploma from this institution," said Carter. "Needless to say, we are pleased with this ranking among the South's best master's universities."

U.S. News & World Report ranked 572 universities who provide a full range of undergraduate and master's-level programs. The 572 universities in this category are then ranked within four geographic areas--North, South, Midwest and West--because, in general, they tend to draw students heavily from surrounding states, according to the magazine's editors. 🍁

Transforming 'campus of the future' - Trustees approve campus master plan

By MARC C. WHITT, EDITOR

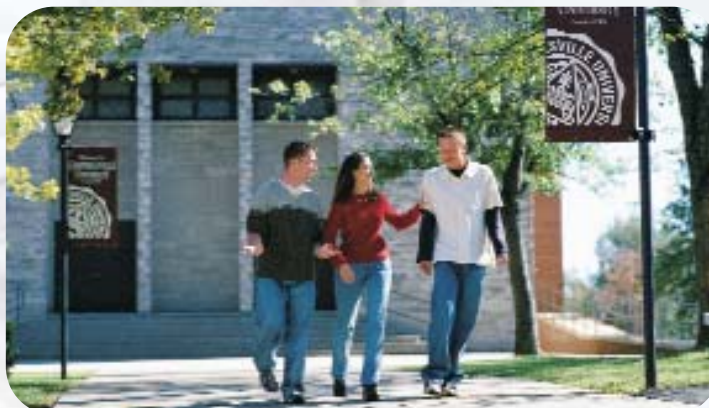

During the past two decades, much research has been done to determine the role and importance of campus facilities and landscaping in terms of attracting and retaining students as well as much-needed fund raising efforts. One such recent study, in fact, points out that nearly 70 percent of an institution's image is based on the condition of its facilities and grounds.

The Campbellsville University Board of Trustees recently approved a new campus master plan, recognizing the importance of enhancing current as well as planning for future facilities and their landscaping needs.

The plan, overseen by a committee comprised of administrators, faculty, students and alumni along with the assistance of Perkins & Will, a nationally recognized architectural design firm based in Chicago, outlines facility renovation, new construction and landscaping needs for the "campus of the future," said University President Michael V. Carter.

"The campus master plan, in many ways, will drive our future capital campaign as it lists those projects deemed to be most important to the future of Campbellsville University and to the way we better serve our students. The plan will now become the guiding document for facilities development at the university."

Implementation of the new campus master plan will occur during a one-to-seven year period. The plan graphically illustrates where future facilities may need to be located, as is the case with the George W. and Marie T. Ransdell Chapel and the Hawkins Athletic Complex, as well as the development of new pedestrian walkways and enhancement of the entranceways to and from the campus.

The campus master plan also provides a list of facility projects determined by their mission and importance during the seven-year period. Among those cited were the construction of a dining hall, a student center which would contain the bookstore, post office, student lounge, and all Student Services' offices, student residences for men and women, a chapel, an athletic field house, facilities for the School of Theology and the proposed School of Nursing, a media center, an academic classroom building, a sports arena and additional parking. The renovation of the J.K. Powell Athletic Center was also noted in the report to the board.

"Students this century not only are selecting colleges and universities because of their rich heritage and academic excellence, but on the beauty and efficiency of the facilities they will call 'home' as well," said Carter. "These facilities, too, will enable Campbellsville University to become even more competitive with other regional private colleges and universities." 🍁

Alternative certification program receives $1.7 million over five years

By MARC C. WHITT, EDITOR

Special education in Kentucky has received a boost thanks to a U.S. Department of Education Transition to Teaching Program grant.

The grant will fund an alternative certification program for special education teachers through Campbellsville University's School of Education. CU will receive $400,000 the first year that may extend up to five years for a total of $1.7 million.

Announced by Kentucky U.S. Representative Ron Lewis, the grant will enable CU's program, Teacher Routes to Alternative Certification (TRAC), to work with school districts to recruit, train and retain qualified special education teachers for Kentucky so to ease the shortage of teachers.

"Kentucky students need qualified teachers and Campbellsville University is in a position to help train and certify them," said Lewis.

Through TRAC, CU will annually place 40 qualified learning behavioral disorders teachers in 27 high-need school systems in Kentucky, amounting to 200 teachers within five years. This includes both an undergraduate and graduate program in special education, according to Dr. Brenda Priddy, interim dean of the School of Education.

Funds will provide scholarships to students who commit to teaching in high-need schools. The funds will also be used to provide online courses and other support to students for the certification program.

"This federal grant demonstrates tremendous faith and support of the university's School of Education," said CU President Michael V. Carter. "For many years, the education faculty at this university has been highly regarded as being among the best in Kentucky and the region. We are deeply committed, as an institution, to assist what has become one of our Commonwealth's greatest needs--that being the teaching, training and retaining of special education teachers for our classrooms."

The U.S. Department of Education's Transition to Teaching Program grant to Campbellsville will provide the university with 64 percent of the project's total cost. Non-governmental sources will provide 36 percent, or $986,588, during the five-year period. ♦

Enrollment momentum continues at CU with record 1,811

By MARC C. WHITT, EDITOR

Campbellsville University has set its second consecutive fall semester enrollment record and its largest enrollment in her nearly 100-year history.

Campbellsville has a head count enrollment of 1,811 students; this represents a 1.9 percent increase over last year's enrollment of 1,777.

In addition, Campbellsville University has recorded its best graduate enrollment with 162 students in its seven master's degree programs. The previous fall semester record for CU's master's degree program was 147, set last year.

The fall 2002 enrollment represents 82 Kentucky counties, 26 states and 24 international countries.

"We are extremely pleased with the continued momentum we are experiencing at Campbellsville University," said CU President Michael V. Carter. "Our admissions staff, faculty, alumni and friends have all helped to make this fall's enrollment a successful one for this institution."

"Campbellsville University is committed to providing an exceptional, Christ-centered education to her students," Carter said. "The excellence of our faculty, a wide selection of 40 majors from which to choose, a competitive financial assistance program for students, our national ranking as one of 'America's Best Colleges' and our Christian mission all combine to make Campbellsville University an attractive choice for a college education at the baccalaureate and graduate levels."

Carter also noted the record occupancy in CU's residence halls this fall. Similar to what many public and private colleges and universities across Kentucky have experienced this year, Campbellsville was no exception with its seven residence halls marking a record occupancy with 680 students.

The continued growth and interest of students wishing to live on campus caught the attention of CU's Board of Trustees at its fall meeting. The trustees approved plans for the administration to study the feasibility of constructing additional residential space.

"We anticipate that the new facilities," said Carter, "will match the architectural design of the university's Residential Village, a townhome complex for women located on the campus's north side near the Betty Dobbins Heilman House (President's Home)."

As for the ever-growing popularity of CU's master's degree program, Carter said he is pleased by how well the program is beginning to capture the interest of those seeking to perform graduate work, whether it is in business, education, music, social science or theology.

Carter also announced that the university's English as a Second Language Institute, a program for those international students who have not yet been admitted as college students but who are studying on-campus to improve their English and study skills, has an enrollment of 22 students. Although not reflected in CU's head count, these students, coupled with this fall's undergraduate and graduate enrollment, pushes the number to 1,833 students who are studying this semester at Campbellsville. ♦

HOMECOMING 2002

The faces of Homecoming

BY ANNE GALITO, STUDENT NEWS WRITER

Campbellsville University celebrated her 2002 Homecoming to the theme "CU's Greatest Hits" Friday and Saturday, Oct. 4-5. During this weekend, various events were held including the 1952 class reunion, a barbecue, pep rally, Homecoming car show, an alumni Tiger baseball game, the annual football game and a parade in downtown Campbellsville.

"We were very pleased with the outcome of Homecoming this year," Joseph D. W. Foster, CU director of development, said. "The crowds were large, the stadium was packed and the turn-out was very successful."

"Homecoming at Campbellsville is about family. It is a time of fellowship with our 'extended family'-- alumni, students, faculty, staff, parents and friends; a time for us to come together and celebrate that sense of family and fellowship."

Coach Ron Finley's Fighting Tigers went up against Lambuth University but fell in a 35-28 upset with Lambuth taking home the win.

Lindsay Ball, a junior from Lancaster, Ky., and a representative of Fellowship of Christian Athletes, was crowned Homecoming Queen. Tiffany Pennington of London, Ky., representing the College Republicans, was first runner-up and Virginia Kelly of Dawson Springs, Ky., representing Phi Beta Lambda, was second runner-up. Freshman attendant was Laura Garling of Louisville, Ky.

Numerous campus clubs and organizations were represented in the 3rd annual parade and float competition. Winning first place and a prize of $300 was Kentucky Heartland Outreach's float; winning second place and $200 was Student Service's float and the Social Workers In Touch Can Help (S.W.I.T.C.H.) float came in third place and was awarded $100.

Reunions were also held for the class of 1982, decade reunions for classes from 1950s through the young alumni 1990-2002, Tiger baseball players, University Chorale, Campus Times, TV-4 and Maple Trail alumni.

Concluding the Homecoming events was a Saturday night dance attended by approximately 225 students. 🍀

U.S. Senator Mitch McConnell declares CU Tech Center 'incentive for the New Economy'

BY MARC C. WHITT, EDITOR

U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) assisted Campbellsville University Aug. 27 as the institution officially dedicated a $2.5 million Technology Training Center on the campus. McConnell, who was instrumental in securing funding for the facility, served as keynote speaker for the ceremony.

This facility became reality in direct response to the closure of Fruit of the Loom's Campbellsville plant, which left 4,000 employees without jobs. Since its opening last spring, the CU Technology Training Center has provided an opportunity for the area workforce to receive much-needed technical training and education.

In addition, the Technology Training Center provides currently enrolled Campbellsville University students and new and existing regional industries and businesses with the latest technology-based equipment and facilities.

McConnell commended the collective efforts of local, state and federal government agencies working hand-in-hand with Campbellsville University to make the facility possible.

CU President Michael V. Carter concurred. "This is a wonderful day in the life of Campbellsville University," said Carter before an audience seated outside in front of the facility. "We are embarking on a new venture that will bring us new opportunities and challenges. The mission of this center is for Campbellsville University to assist business and industry in bringing an enhanced quality of life to this region through technological education."

"The Technology Training Center is a tremendous resource not only for Campbellsville and Taylor County, but our Commonwealth and the entire region," Carter said. 🍁

When I reflect on my college days at Campbellsville University, delightful thoughts flood my mind. The memories of those days carry me back to a time when friendships were made, spiritual connections were strengthened, and life-long lessons were learned. I cherish those memories and hold them near and dear in my heart.

I don't think anyone can understand the passion I have for Campbellsville University without understanding the circumstances I came under. I had left a $150,000 scholarship at West Point the year before and went from hometown hero to hometown zero. You know how that can make a young guy feel...empty. My pastor in Cincinnati, Campbellsville alum Garry Stringer, turned me to Campbellsville College. I originally came to play basketball. Coach (Lou) Cunningham told me he was sorry but he had already given his last scholarship. Then God and destiny took over and Coach Cunningham saw my honors in football and said a football program was going to start that year. He introduced me to Coach (Ron) Finley and the rest is history. Wow, how that single event changed my life forever!

They say you never miss something 'til it's gone; well, that is true. After four years of complaining about being there (at CU), I realized how much I loved it. Campbellsville University helped me tremendously by giving me a solid base from which to leap. I figured out who I am, and being at CU and surrounded by people who care gave me confidence in myself and my decisions. After spending some time in Beverly Hills and shopping on Rodeo Drive, I have realized just how much I miss the accent from Kentucky, and when I meet anyone from the South, it brings back all the warm memories of my "home away from home."

My experience at Campbellsville University was definitely worthwhile and something I will always remember and appreciate. The small size of CU really does provide a good support system for students and makes a person feel at home and appreciated. At CU, you're not just another student; you're an important part of the whole University.

Two poems about the Maple Trail by William Brown ('55) and Mike Mason ('92)

The Maple Trail

by William Brown ('55)

When I am old and frail,
Lead me down the Maple Trail.
Let me talk with friends of old
And walk once more on fields of gold;
And hold the hand that once held mine
And sing the songs of grace divine.
Yes, when I am old and frail,
Lead me down The Maple Trail.

The Maple Trail

by Mike Mason ('92)

A lonesome past came with me that day upon my conscience it heavily lay with welcoming eyes you opened your arms dismissing the sorrows and all of life's harms for there I took root and began to grow and actually blossomed to all who would know love gushes forth from every nook and cranny a sense of home abounds it seems so uncanny we are all diverse yet gather as one my adopted family shines bright as the sun never judging, but encouraging me to set sail
OH how I love thee my old Maple Trail...
GOD BLESS CAMPBELLSVILLE

Campbellsville University Athletic Hall of Fame

Purpose:

The purpose of the Campbellsville University Athletic Hall of Fame is to recognize those persons who have demonstrated the highest standards of character and recognized athletic achievement while at Campbellsville University, or have exhibited great leadership and direction in advancing the excellence of Campbellsville University's athletic program.

Criteria and Procedure:

Nominations:

- Nominations may come from those individuals or groups interested in and who support Campbellsville university athletics. Former university athletes and current supporters of the athletic program are strongly encouraged to nominate individuals for consideration as inductees into Campbellsville University's Athletic Hall of Fame.

- Only written nominations made in the form of the official Nomination Form will be considered. The official nomination form is available on the following page of the Campbellsvillian.
- Nominations must be received by Rusty Hollingsworth, director of athletics, Campbellsville University, 1 University Drive, UPO 1316, Campbellsville, KY 42718 by February 3, 2003.
- Nominees who are former university athletes must have graduated or have been disassociated with Campbellsville University for a minimum of five years prior to nomination. Coaches and university employees are eligible for nomination.
- Consideration will be given to those involved with Russell Creek Academy, Campbellsville Junior College, Campbellsville College and Campbellsville University.
- Both living and deceased nominees may be considered.

Selection Process:

- The selection committee will thoroughly consider all timely nominations and will determine two inductees for a given year. Nominees who receive a majority vote from the selection committee will be inducted. The Athletic Hall of Fame Committee may not annually induct individuals into the University's Athletic Hall of Fame.
- Selection Committee:
 - Director of Athletics, Chairperson
 - Director of Athletic Promotions

FCA national president shares message of Christ and character at CU

BY SCOTT MOONEY, DIRECTOR OF SPORTS INFORMATION

Dal Shealy, national president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, shared the message of Christ along with encouragement and motivational thoughts to athletes at a visit to Campbellsville University.

He encouraged the young people, at several sessions, to seek discipline and character in their lives and to strive to be positive role models. He also spent time promoting FCA's "One Way to Play" program, which works to keep athletes away from drugs and alcohol. He pointed out that most of the discipline and life problems of players that he had to deal with as a coach almost always traced back to alcohol. He challenged each group to "be the very best they could be."

Shealy threw out the game ball prior to CU's football game with Austin Peay State University. 🍁

New volleyball coaches no odd couple

BY SCOTT MOONEY, DIRECTOR OF SPORTS INFORMATION

Two months before the school year started, Skeet Woolard and Billy Gregory did not even know each other much less have any idea they would be coaching a college volleyball team together. While the two coaches and their situation are different, they are certainly no odd couple.

Woolard, the Lady Tigers' head coach, is a 28-year-old native of North Carolina who was working in the banking and investment world and discovered Campbellsville through the CU web site as he was looking into the field of sports ministry. He played basketball at North Carolina Greensboro and had no experience in volleyball prior to taking the job.

Gregory is a 32-year-old native of Franklin, Ky., who is a detective with the Kentucky State Police. Gregory is also a former CU student and father of two. He has been involved with volleyball nearly all his life.

The similarity in the coaches is three fold. Foremost is character. They both have it and when they sat down for the first time together, they both agreed that they wanted to bring values to the table in running the program.

"We wanted a program that was a reflection of the Christian values and mission of Campbellsville University," said Woolard.

The second similarity in the two is the love for sports and young people. The third similarity is intensity. Woolard and Gregory are intense coaches.

"God brought us here to do a job, and we have to get it done," Gregory said. The two work hand-in-hand and egos have never been an issue. Woolard is learning from Gregory, who couldn't take the head coaching job because of his work schedule.

"I have learned most of the volleyball I know from Billy," Woolard said. "He focuses on the tactics and technique and I focus on the administrative and logistical stuff. We handle the leadership and motivation together." 🍁

Remember When?

By JOAN C. MCKINNEY, MANAGING EDITOR

Heritage Day 2002 celebrated the 1940s and 1950s. Below are pictures from those years which were used in a Sept. 25 presentation at Campbellsville Baptist Church.

We wanted to share these days with you.

Guess Who?

These three young men lounged on the grass at Campbellsville in the 1940s or 1950s. Can you guess who they are to win a Campbellsville University t-shirt?

In the Last Issue...

We really stumped our readers in the last issue of the Campbellsvillian with pictures of a current CU faculty/staff couple's children. Only two people attempted to Guess Who?

The winner of a CU t-shirt was Karen Lynema, who is retired from CU's Montgomery Library. The other person guessing the names of the children was Jana Martin Kemp ('78), who helped identify other pictures in the magazine as well.

Also helping identify people were Teresa (TC) Phillips Travis ('83); Pat Neal ('80), who was in one of the pictures; the Rev. Ron Hicks (a '80); Jim Haton ('83); Paula Settle ('77); and Marbara Baker Stivers ('75).

Thanks so much for helping us! ♦

From your president

BY MICHAEL BLACKBURN, ('99)
ACTING PRESIDENT, CAMPBELLVILLE UNIVERSITY
BOARD OF ALUMNI AND THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

Homecoming 2002 has come and gone and after having fellowship with many alumni, I am left with a prevailing thought about Campbellsville University and our Alumni Association.

Homecoming brought back alumni from the Class of 1942, Class of 2002 and many, many classes in between. Constituent groups like the 1992 and 1997 football teams, the Maple Trail, Campus Times and TV-4 staffs and the 1962 basketball team gathered to relive memories of their college days.

There were a variety of activities, including the revived Homecoming Parade, the Big Maroon Club Tailgate Party and the Homecoming Festival with booths, games and decade reunions. Homecoming 2002 provided something for every alumnus who returned "home" for the weekend.

As I took part in the events and chatted with friends, old and new, I was reminded that Campbellsville University is still about family. Campbellsville University alumni, friends, current students, parents of current and former students, faculty and staff make up an extended family that takes a few moments every year to come together for food and fellowship like our own extended families do throughout the year.

More than that, the alumni I spoke with expressed, in varied ways, their sincere appreciation for the educational experience, the friendships they forged and the memories they made whether at Campbellsville Junior College, Campbellsville College or, now, Campbellsville University.

For those of you who were able to attend Homecoming 2002, I hope you took home the same feeling of pride in and thankfulness for our extended family as I did. For all those alumni who could not attend, and for those who did, please make plans to take part in one of the regional alumni and friends events near you which will be held in the spring. Dates and locations will be available at www.campbellsville.edu after the first of the year. Our regional events, like Homecoming, are a wonderful time of fellowship for the extended University family.

As we approach the end of the calendar year and spend time with our family and friends over the holidays, make it a priority to contact and spend time with members of your extended Campbellsville University family as well. 🍁

Trent Argo, CU director of admissions, said CU has more than 130 international students enrolled from 24 countries. This has jumped from 22 international students from five countries in 1989 when Argo began working in admissions. Fifty-six national flags of current and former students' homelands were dedicated in a "Flags of Nation" ceremony Sept. 11 in the Student Activities Center. The flags are on permanent display in the building. Stan McKinney, left, assistant professor of journalism, was the organizer of the event. At right is Dr. Pamela Zhu, professor of education, who is from China and who spoke of becoming a U.S. citizen.
