“A MESSAGE FROM THE” PRESIDENT

SUMMER 2018

For the past 19 years, since the day that I accepted the presidency of your university, I have seen a lot of change. We have witnessed new buildings, an expanded faculty and staff, off-campus centers and a student growth of more than six hundred percent. Today, I see a lot of activity continuing at this changing institution.

Summer 2018 served nearly 9,000 students and visitors who experienced this beautiful Christian campus. More than 125 young people made first-time decisions for Christ. Also, we had 4,500 students taking credit courses. That's a record breaker.

Work is progressing on the new athletic fieldhouse. See for yourself on the campbellsvilletigers.com website. Also, the Betty Dobbins Heilman Wellness Center is well underway.

While the buildings help create an atmosphere, it is the people, here now and those who have come before, that make Campbellsville University the place that it is.

Within this expanded issue of the Campbellsvillian you will find a story on Steve Miley, a 1983 graduate, who recently became associate director of the Marshall Space Center, and on the cover are three of our recent student-athlete graduates, Elliott Young, Adam Sandidge and Zach Napier, who became Kentucky State Troopers.

Two students, Bradley Dunagan and Nick Ratliff, are members of a bass fishing team and they represent more than a hook and a line. Two recent retirees, Dr. Milton Rogers and Dr. John Chowning continue to demonstrate the wonderful “town and gown” relationship we enjoy with Campbellsville and Taylor County, here in central Kentucky.

And, you won't want to miss the touching story of Katherine Mumaw Nally, an 88-year-old who finished her bachelor's degree in May, walking the aisle with the largest graduating class in our history.

The footprint for CU is growing, statewide and nationwide. With more than a dozen regional centers and instructional sites, your university is coast to coast. With the expansion of the Conover Center in Harrodsburg, Ky., and the opening of sites in Jacksonville, FL; Chicago, IL area; and Lathrop, CA (near Silicon Valley), we are offering greater opportunities for students who are seeking and enrolling in Christian higher education with your university. Stand by for new announcements soon.

Of course, this does not happen without the support of Campbellsville University's many alumni and friends. Our capital campaign, “Our Time, This Place,” is nearing the $61.1 million goal, but we are not there, yet. We need your continued support to fulfill the dreams for the next generation of Christian servant leaders. Allow me to thank you for your generous, and sacrificial gifts to the campaign.

You are part of the CU mission, providing Christian higher education. You can help through prayers, financial support and sharing the message of Campbellsville University, your university. And, as we embark on another school year, don't hesitate in contacting me with any ideas you may have that can make your university even greater.

Most Cordially,

Steven Miley soars from Air Force to NASA and beyond

BY JOSH CHRISTIAN, STUDENT NEWS WRITER

“After I joined NASA, I quickly realized I had the chance to be a part of something really important to our country, even important to the world,” Steven Miley, ’83 alumnus of Campbellsville University, who was recently promoted to associate director of NASA’s Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., said.

Miley, a Dayton, Ohio native, served three years as director of office procurement at the Marshall Space Flight Center before his promotion May 25.

Miley has worked in various positions for NASA, but for his most recent position as the associate director, Miley manages and leads the development of the center's institution and operations, provides operational guidance, budget development and business decisions.

"I also advise the center's director on the direction of the center's future and provide executive leadership to the center's senior managers for NASA space transportation, propulsion, space systems and scientific research programs," Miley said.

"Probably the best description of my job when describing it in terms of the commercial sector would be chief operating officer," Miley said.

However, Miley's career aspirations didn't extend as far as NASA when he started his career.

After graduating from Campbellsville University in 1983, Miley attended The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky. He graduated in 1986 with his master's degree, but decided that he would enlist in the United States Air Force, as he was interested in flight.

"I think my biggest motivator, even going back to my time in the Air Force, has been to be a part of anything having to do with flying or space flight," Miley said.

Miley received his commission, becoming an officer in the United States Air Force, through the University of Louisville Reserve Officers' Training Corps (ROTC) program, and after a few years in the Air Force, Miley had the opportunity to work for NASA in various capacities while in the Air Force Reserves.

Miley said he didn't have the skills to be a great pilot or astronaut, but he wanted to contribute in his own way.

"The opportunities to work at NASA Field Centers and at NASA Headquarters allowed me to see various aspects of NASA's missions across the human spaceflight, science and research and technology areas," Miley said.

"I think these opportunities helped prepare me for this role," Miley said. "The most important aspect for me in preparing for this job though has been the incredible people I've been fortunate to serve with."

Part of his preparation, according to Miley, began during his time at Campbellsville University.

"Campbellsville University is the foundation for me. I learned so much there and had great mentors and instructors. I think the biggest thing was that getting the liberal arts degree really opened my eyes to the world and the possibilities," Miley said.

Miley attended Campbellsville University as a result of his older sister, Cheryl, who was already attending the university and who he would say was a mentor to him in many ways.

"I am very fortunate and blessed to be a part of NASA's mission," Miley said.

"We are building the most powerful rocket ever to be designed and developed to take humans to the moon and beyond. We are providing payload operations for the International Space Station on a 24/7, 365 days a year basis, and we have had the opportunity to create magnificent spacecraft, carrying instruments that peer into the universe," Miley said.

"There is rarely a day that I do not look forward to getting to work."

Miley's advice to the 20-year-olds and those who are searching for their place in the professional world is to "invest time into exploring your options and don't limit the possibilities."

"Once you find something you love, try to find others who share your passions and keep relationships going. Your relationships sometimes come full circle," Miley said. ♡

Six Decades of Connection:

Mercer Countians are CU's first couple

BY JESSE RUSSELL, STUDENT NEWS WRITER

There is just something about Mercer County, Ky.

In 1958, Gene and Jan Parrott Robinson, who live in Burgin, Ky., in Mercer County, were named Mr. and Miss Campbellsville Junior College. Sixty years later, Landon Dean Rogers and Christy Baxter Ingram, both of Mercer County, were named Mr. and Miss Campbellsville University.

Ingram said having been given the Miss Campbellsville University title is “extremely humbling; I feel very undeserving of this award, so it came as quite a shock.”

Ingram said she was honored to follow after Mrs. Robinson.

“After hearing a little about her, watching her receive her diploma this past December and realizing that she lives in Burgin, the community I grew up in, I feel like it adds a unique twist to receiving this award.

“Then, to receive the award alongside Landon, who I have gotten to know quite well in my time here, and lives about five minutes from my parents’ house just added to the whole affect.”

Rogers agreed with Ingram about following in the footsteps of Gene Robinson.

“Mr. Robinson lives right behind me,” he said. “He is a very nice man, and his wife is a very sweet lady. My family has known them for years, which is what makes this whole experience so funny. I think that it is too cool to have our little town represented this way. It’s not very often that Burgin shows up the way that it did at Awards Day.”

Ingram graduated in May with a Bachelor of Social Work. She was involved in many activities while at CU and has been a member of the dean’s list and worked as an intern in the Office of Admissions.

Ingram was involved in the HOLA Spanish Club that strives to break the cultural stereotypes and build relationships across cultural boundaries. She also attended the social work trip to help people recover after Hurricane Harvey.

She worked at Campbellsville’s Kid SpOt Center that specializes in providing rehabilitation therapy, community living support and behavior support services to children ages birth to 21 of all levels.

Ingram said, “It is so easy for me to see how the Lord has orchestrated opportunities for me during my time at CU. I am thankful to CU for being the place the Lord saw fit for all of this to play out.”

Ingram is a 2014 graduate of Mercer County Senior High School and plans to earn her master’s in social work degree. She is the daughter of Mike and Ellen Ingram.

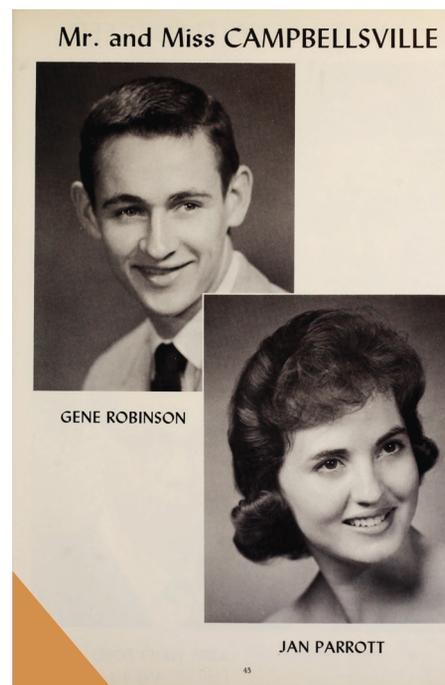

Rogers, the grandson of Sandy Rogers, of Harrodsburg, and the late Marion Rogers, and the son of the late Andrea Rogers Carey, is a 2013 graduate of Burgin Independent High School.

Rogers graduated in May with a Bachelor of Science degree in Middle Grades 5-9. He wants to teach social studies.

Rogers said, “I am ecstatic about the award. I think that it is an extreme honor, and I can think of no other way to sum up my career at Campbellsville than with that award.”

Rogers believes the future of Kentucky lies within its schools, which is why he chose to be an educator. He has a passion for helping students achieve their goals and do their best. He said a good teacher employs skills that their students can use both inside and outside of the classroom such as empathy, public speaking and how to participate in humanity.

While at CU, Rogers was on the dean’s list, served as a resident assistant, a summer ministry team member, member of Student Government Association, the Baptist Campus Ministry and the History Club. He also participated in Phi Alpha Theta, Church Outreach, Kentucky Education

Sixty years ago, Gene Robinson and Jan Parrott (now Robinson), of Burgin were named Mr. and Miss Campbellsville.

Association – Student Program and Tuesday Night Live.

Rogers said, “I love CU; I am very proud of my school.”

Mrs. Robinson, the 1958 Miss Campbellsville Junior College, received her associate of science degree in social studies at the December 2017 commencement ceremony after almost 60 years.

Dr. Donna Hedgepath, provost and vice president for academic affairs, said of the Robinsons: “Six decades later they continue to love Campbellsville University more and more with each passing year.” 🐾

10th Annual Diamond Derby Rose Gala

A decade of raising scholarships for students

The Derby Rose Gala was established in 2009 by the Campbellsville University Advancement Board as a fundraising effort to help gain scholarship money for CU students. Now, ten years later, the Derby Rose Gala has raised almost $400,000 in scholarship money.

“A lot of work and labor goes into making this event happen,” Gwinn Hahn, a 1970 graduate and chair of the Derby Rose Gala, said. Hahn has been the chair of the gala since it began, and each year she challenges herself, and the people working alongside her, to produce a dinner better than the previous year.

For the past two years, Damon Rivers, a local florist and event planner, has provided his services to the planning committee and this year he said, “I wanted to bring out the diamond theme for the 10th year.”

Betty Hord, a 1968 CU graduate, was the main person in charge of decorations, and she along with Rivers, wanted to find a way to produce a diamond jubilee. When describing the gala, Hord said it was “the most exciting gala, gala number 10.”

Natalie Shadrick, a freshman of Paducah, Ky., was a student guest speaker during the event. Shadrick said, “I knew this was where God wanted me to be.” She spoke about when she started college, she knew exactly what she wanted to do, but as time progressed she began to doubt herself. Shadrick was no longer certain about what she wanted to get her degree in, but knew that she was where she needed to be and that's what mattered.

Shadrick said, "I couldn't be here without the scholarships." Shadrick is thankful for the financial support she is receiving from the university and thanked the Advancement Board and Derby Rose Gala committee for finding a way to help raise money for students.

"We're rated in the top 25 universities of the South that students graduate with the least amount of debt," Dr. Michael V. Carter, Campbellsville University president, said. Sam Morehead, a junior of Alto, Ky., can say he is one of those students. Morehead is a pastoral ministries major and will be graduating next year completely debt free. "Thank you for investing in me and in those like me who are yet to come by the gift of scholarships," Morehead said to the Advancement Board and donors.

During the ceremony, Roy Rich, a 1967 alumnus from Elizabethtown, Ky., owner of E-town Exterminating made a $25,000 scholarship donation to the university.

Broadcast, journalism, public relations and photojournalism students from the mass communication department cover the event.

Sara Curry, a late 1960s graduate of CU and chair of the Advancement Board, said "It's a labor of love." Curry also talked about how these are the events that students are going to remember for years to come.

As the guest speaker, Heilman spoke about his life as a young man and how he got to the position he is in today. He wanted students to know that when they go through life they have a purpose and, if they live to fulfill that purpose, then life will work out the way it was supposed to.

Heilman grew up on a farm milking cows and lived during the Great Depression. He realized as a young man, he was meant for more than milking cows. Now, at the age of 92, Heilman supports CU and her students by giving back to the university and serving as an esteemed alumnus.

Following the gala, a concert was held which featured Broadway performer J. Mark McVey and his wife, Christy Tarr-McVey. 🐾

a lifetime of service to family and community

BY ARIEL C. EMBERTON, STUDENT NEWS WRITER

Long-time Campbellsville University supporter Roy Rich of Elizabethtown made a $25,000 donation for an endowed scholarship at the recent Derby Rose Gala.

Rich, a 1967 alumnus of Campbellsville, has always tried “to be an ambassador for CU” he said. His latest donation will be for the establishment of the Roy and Brenda Rich Endowed Scholarship, in memory and honor of his wife who died Oct. 21, 2016.

The money in this fund will go to help scholars who may not be able to afford a college education otherwise.

Rich has been an active member of the Campbellsville University Advancement Board since 1988 when he saw a need for scholarship money, and he decided to help in his own way.

He is now a regional sponsor for the Derby Rose Gala. Each year, at the Derby Rose Gala, two students are given the opportunity to talk about how the scholarships they have received have positively impacted their lives. “The testimonies were what inspired me,” Rich said.

Before the Derby Rose Gala became a reality, Rich was working on other ways to improve and help those at the university. He was instrumental in securing necessary sections of land so the university could expand, including negotiating the sale of the Chandler property to the university where the E. Bruce Heilman Student Complex is located, and he played a role in helping to build the Betty Dobbins Heilman House (president’s home).

His wife, as a student in fall 1965, also worked for the university under the late president J.K. Powell.

Brenda and Roy Rich

Over the years, Rich has made many connections and developed friendships with people from various institutions. He plays a large role at the University of Kentucky, has a strong relationship with Dr. E. Bruce Heilman, Campbellsville University 1949 alumnus, CU Board of Trustees member and chancellor at University of Richmond, and is close to the current Campbellsville University president Dr. Michael V. Carter.

Rich is very passionate about what he does, and he hopes that by donating to the university scholarship fund he will, most importantly, help a scholar in need.

Rich also wants to show others that their donations will help and wants to encourage others to do the same as what he has done and more.

“After I heard the students speak [at the Derby Rose Gala], I felt good about it,” Rich said.

Rich is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rich of Clay, Ky. ♣

Eight retirees honored by colleagues

BY JOSH CHRISTIAN, STUDENT NEWS WRITER

“Even if everything changes, this is always home,” Dr. Michael V. Carter, president of Campbellsville University, said at the retirement reception held in the Betty Dobbins Heilman House recently.

“My favorite memory is seeing my students succeed in a very real sense,” Dr. Milton Rogers, professor of biology and retiree after 45 years at Campbellsville University, said.

“A professor is a dream maker; we invest in our students.”

Rogers was among the eight faculty and staff who retired after several years of service to Campbellsville University.

The retirees were celebrated by family, friends and students. Lunch was provided before Dr. Jeanette Parker, assistant vice president for academic affairs and associate professor of psychology; Otto Tennant, vice president for finance and administration and Dr. H. Keith Spears, vice president for communication and assistant to the president, gave remarks about each of the retirees.

Dr. Gordon Weddle, professor of biology, director of Clay Hill Memorial Forest and retiree after 37 years of service at Campbellsville University, was also among the retirees.

“Some of my students have gone on to be successful medical doctors,” Weddle said.

Weddle said he enjoyed seeing his students go on to work in their different fields.

“I have done dozens of musicals and operas, and I have enjoyed every single one of them,” Dr. Mark Bradley, professor of music and retiree after 38 years of service at Campbellsville University, said.

Bradley said he also enjoyed announcing for the Campbellsville University Tigers football and basketball teams. He has announced for the football team since its return to CU in 1987.

Bradley, Milton and Rogers also remarked on how things have changed in their 30 plus years of service.

“When I first came to Campbellsville University, there were only 500 students,” Bradley said.

“There also weren’t any roads, either. Everything was gravel. I even remember watching them put down the blacktop.”

Other retirees were Dr. Beverly Ennis, dean and professor at the School of Education; Jake Davis, postmaster; Dwight Gilpin, special projects/apartment maintenance; Dr. Glen Taul, reference librarian; and Maryann Matheny, ESL instructor and endorsement specialist, were also honored during the reception.

Campbellsville University's Rogers and Chowning receive chamber awards

BY JOAN C. MCKINNEY, EDITOR

Two Campbellsville University employees, Dr. Milton Rogers and Dr. John Chowning, were honored at the Campbellsville-Taylor County Chamber of Commerce Banquet June 21 at the Taylor County Cooperative Extension Office.

Also, Dr. Pat Cowherd, dean of the CU School of Business, Economics and Technology, was welcomed as the new chamber president.

Rogers, professor of biology, who retired at the end of the academic year, was awarded the Educator of the Year Award, and Chowning, executive assistant to the president for government, community and constituent relations, was given the Outstanding Chamber Investor Award.

Rogers, who taught at CU 45 years, said, "It was a great honor to be nominated and selected as the Campbellsville/Taylor County Chamber of Commerce Educator of the Year for 2018. It has been, and continues to be, a privilege to work in this community.

"I came to Campbellsville College 45 years ago to teach biology and related topics, bringing with me my wife, Diane, and our three young children. We established our lives in Campbellsville and we found a good life here.

"Our children grew up in a nurturing, encouraging community provided by the people of Campbellsville, and Diane completed her career at Taylor County High School as a biology teacher and guidance counselor. The people and the businesses of the city have supported Campbellsville University, and together we have all prospered.

"My teaching career has been rewarding, and it has been fulfilling to teach and mentor students and then to watch them be successful in their careers. Many of these former students live and work in and around Campbellsville, and they contribute to our remarkable community.

"My heartfelt thanks to the Chamber for recognizing my contributions to education and to our community."

Rogers received his Bachelor of Science in Composite Science Education and his Ph.D. in Botany and Cell Biology from the University of Texas at Austin and completed postdoctoral work at Iowa State University.

He has served as chair of the CU faculty, as biology lead professor, as co-sponsor of Sigma Zeta National Science & Mathematics Honor Society, has held many other roles and published numerous articles. He has won Campbellsville University's Distinguished Faculty Award, the Challenger Award and the Servant Leadership Award.

A former student of Rogers said, "Not only was Dr. Rogers a great professor and mentor to me, but he also was my mother's professor. If it had not been for the kindness he showed my mother when she was a student, I might not be the soon-to-be Dr. Blaire Arnold."

Rogers and his wife, Diane Norfleet Nichols Rogers, who also worked in the Office of Alumni and Public Relations at CU, three children are: David Rogers, a chemical engineer at Clariant in Louisville, Ky.; Sally Culley, a commercial litigation lawyer in Orlando, Fla.;

and Dr. Tom Rogers, a physician in Campbellsville, and eight grandchildren.

Chowning's award is meant to recognize and applaud those investors who have sacrificed time, service and resources in order to better the community alongside the chamber of commerce.

Chad Shively, a chamber board of directors member, said, "Our honoree tonight has contributed so much to this community, as well as on regional, state and national levels."

He said Chowning had "displayed a sense of commitment to our community through his dedication to assisting others and the willingness to donate, time, money and effort to community activities."

He said Chowning has "modeled strong leadership and humility, making it nearly impossible to measure the impact he has had on this community."

Chowning, who was unable to attend the banquet, said later, "It is certainly a great honor to receive the Outstanding Chamber Investor of the Year Award from the chamber of commerce. I was very surprised and know there are many others deserving of such recognition.

"As an individual member for many years and having been one of those representing Campbellsville University in chamber activities, I have witnessed the many contributions made by the organization and the members.

"The chamber's mission is to represent the interests of businesses and commercial enterprises, and the overall economy of our community and region. We are all called to serve and promote the betterment and advancement of Campbellsville-Taylor County and this heartland of Kentucky region.

"Let me express my appreciation for this award as we all work together to move our community forward."

Chowning has been associated with Campbellsville University for 25 years, including serving on the university's Board of Trustees as a member and chair.

He is the founding director of CU's Kentucky Heartland Institute on Public Policy and helped established CU's Center for Bivocational and Small Church Ministry.

He has served three terms on the Kentucky State Board of Elections and as chair and vice chair and member of the Kentucky Long-Term Policy Research Center, a charter member and former chair of The Center for Rural Development and one of the founding members of Team Taylor County. He continues to serve on the Campbellsville-Taylor County Economic Development Board.

He has served as pastor of Saloma Baptist Church since 1994.

Katherine Nally

88, and still growing

BY JOSH CHRISTIAN, STUDENT NEWS WRITER

The age-old expression, “Your best years are behind you,” would not apply to Katherine Nally, 88 years young, and 2018 graduate of Campbellsville University.

After the many years of putting family first, Nally, who is from Louisville, Ky., has graduated from Campbellsville University with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Liberal Arts and Science.

“I went back to school for my own satisfaction,” Nally said.

Nally did not go back to school for the purpose of a career but to prove to herself she could do it.

“I think education broadens your understanding, particularly your understanding of other people,” Nally said.

“I met all kinds of people, all people trying to improve themselves.

“I think you need to keep learning, even beyond college,” Nally said.

Nally had started her degree when she was 18 at Greenville University, then Greenville College. However, according to Nally, there weren’t as many scholarship opportunities then, and she had to quit attending once she ran out of money.

After leaving school, Nally got married, had three children and started raising a family, but she never gave up her dream.

Some years later she began to attend classes at the University of Louisville, but her husband’s health issues caused her to take a step back from her studies.

Once she was ready to return, Nally found Campbellsville University’s Louisville Education Center.

“I loved the physical accessibility of the campus, and the spiritual aspect of the school,” Nally said.

She said the professors at Campbellsville University were the best part of her experience, yet when asked to name a favorite professor she hesitated.

“All of them had their strengths, but they were all helpful,” Nally said.

Nally said the internship she had to complete as part her program was her most memorable experience.

Nally volunteered at multiple nursing homes, where she would sing, read and talk with the patients.

“I came home after my first day volunteering crying because a patient got sick at a table beside me,” Nally said. “But I sucked up my guts and went back the next day. I began to see them as people.”

According to Nally, the people just wanted to be spoken with and listened to.

Nally enjoyed playing the piano and singing for the patients as well.

“I believe in the power and blessing of music. Even if music makes you cry, that’s good. Tears are healing. Music helps heal the hurt. It soothes your soul,” Nally said.

Among Nally’s favorite classes were her theology classes as ◆ Katherine Nally, 88, got a standing ovation as she receives her Bachelor of Science in Liberal Arts and Sciences degree from Dr. Michael V. Carter, president. Applauding her accomplishment were Dr. Lisa Allen, interim dean of the School of Education, associate professor of education and chair of the Faculty Forum and Henry Lee, chair of the CU Board of Trustees. (CU Photo by Joshua Williams) she believed that theology impacts everyone's lives.

Nally's father was the Free Methodist preacher of a small town, and being raised during the period that followed the Great Depression, Nally was raised to share what she had.

"Now, everyone meets in restaurants. But before, everyone would meet in each other's homes," Nally said.

"And that's how we were raised. We always had an open door," Nally said.

Nally's study of theology only highlighted these principles, as it made her study of the Bible deeper.

"I do really believe that studying theology teaches you to think deeper."

Nally won the Christian Studies Award at Campbellsville University's Honors and Awards Day.

A saying that Nally lives by is, "I do not agree with the words that you say, but I will defend your right to say them."

However, Nally's experience at Campbellsville University wasn't always so easy.

After many years of not being in school, Nally forgot what it took to be a student, at first.

"I had to relearn how to learn," she said.

"It was a process," Nally said. "I was first on the Dean's list, then the next semester I was on the President's list."

Her grades took a turn for the worse during her final term as she struggled with the death of her brother.

"That was the worse term I ever had, and if my professors hadn't been so kind to me, I wouldn't have made it," Nally said.

Nally also struggled with learning the computer.

Because of her experience working for the Salvation Army's Human Resource department, Nally had computer experience.

"Microsoft Word was a completely different experience," Nally said.

She also struggled to learn Campbellsville University's Moodle program, the online program sponsored by Learning House.

"Moodle about threw me up the wall," Nally said.

Despite these difficulties, through the support of her family and her professors, she has earned her college degree.

Nally was named Courier Journal's Mother of the Year in May.

Nally doesn't know what she will do with her free time since she has graduated, but one thing she wants to do is study her Bible deeper.

And when she has been asked if she plans to continue pursuing her Master's in Theology, she says, "Not until I can quit dreaming about homework." 🐾

“Because I cannot add years to my life, I want to add life to my years. If I am not able to do anything about the length of my life, I can do something about its breadth and depth,” Dr. E. Bruce Heilman, 92, chancellor at the University of Richmond in Virginia told Campbellsville University graduates in his commencement address Saturday, May 12.

“The most important day in an institution is commencement. This is one of those days you will always remember. My heart is full of thankfulness and humbled by your accomplishments. We are very proud of you,” Dr. Michael V. Carter, in his 19th year as president, told 699 students, a record, in four ceremonies on May 11 and 12.

Carter said Campbellsville University has also set a record enrollment of more than 10,000 students, and students graduating from CU have the lowest student debt of any public or private institution in the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

Celebrating this most important day in the life of the university was Heilman, a 1949 graduate of Campbellsville Junior College who is a long-time serving member of the university’s Board of Trustees.

Heilman is also chancellor of the University of Richmond in Virginia and has devoted 66 years of his life to higher education, 22 years of which he served as a college or university president.

He was presented a plaque in recognition for his Distinguished Service and Philanthropy.

In the morning ceremony Saturday, Heilman spoke of his advanced age of 92 and being a spokesman for The Greatest Generation. “I likely will be the last one this university will ever have from World War II, and you caught me just in time,” he laughed.

As Katherine Mumaw Nally of Louisville, who is 88, received her bachelor of science degree in liberal arts and science, Heilman rose from his chair and helped her up the stairs to the stage.

Nally was recently recognized by Courier Journal newspaper in Louisville as its Mother of the Year.

Heilman, who has spent his last 20 years doing things that haven’t been done before at his age, has traveled 100,000 miles to all 50 states, working with the Gold Star Families who have lost loved ones in battle. Since graduating in 1949, he has traveled to 145 countries.

“I suggest to you, while you are very young, that you will enjoy life just as much if you can live to my age rather than to presume that at some point, beyond 50, life is not worth living,” he told the graduates.

“That is a mistake. Life is great at 92. I am interacting with young people, watching you emerge like the butterfly from the cocoon, strengthening your wings and moving out to experience the world as I have these many years,” he said.

He received a standing ovation, and many graduates, on their way to receive their diploma, stopped to shake his hand.

At the noon ceremony, he spoke of the life of a university president and all that goes into being one. He said he told an employee once to “do what’s right” in a situation. “That’s a philosophy of the president, which is in the minds and hearts of many people,” he said.

Heilman, as a member of the Marine Corps, served in the South Pacific and Japan during World War II and struggled through the Great Depression.

Heilman has left a legacy at Campbellsville University, in which the president’s home is named the Betty Dobbins Heilman House, in honor of his late wife, who graduated in 1948 from Campbellsville Junior College.

Carter, in his charge to the graduates, urged them to love as in the “love” chapter of the Bible in 1 Corinthians. He said, “You might have all of the knowledge in the world, but unless you have love, it is meaningless.” He said we need to bridge the difference of cultures and find ways to live together on the planet.

Fellowship, leadership and scholarship are the words on the university’s academic seal.

Four students responded to Carter’s charge. At the first ceremony on Friday night, Esther Tsumba, a master of social work graduate from Zimbabwe, said, “Dare to trust God’s plan for your life. Dare to be different from the norm in the world. Dare to be a positive impact and influence to others, and most of all, dare to embrace who you are and dare to be you.”

In the 9 a.m. Saturday commencement, Landon Dean Rogers of Harrodsburg, who was named Mr. Campbellsville University and received a bachelor of science in middle grades education 5-9 and social studies, said he wants the graduates to remember three points: 1. Learn from the hard moments in your life. 2. Commit yourself to be a life-long learner. 3. Be humble and learn from your mistakes and teach others from your mistakes.

Carter and Dr. Donna Hedgepath, provost and vice president for academic affairs, presented the graduates.

Darryl Peavler, a 2003 undergraduate and 2005 graduate student at Campbellsville University, who serves as director of alumni relations, welcomed the students into the Campbellsville University Alumni Association, and told the graduates, "You have achieved one of the greatest milestones in your life thus far.

"Today, you will become part of a tremendous alumni family that reaches around the globe. At 14,000 strong, the Campbellsville University Alumni Association has members in 67 countries and 46 states. We are excited to welcome you and to see where your path leads." 🐾

From cooking to archery Kids College offers options

BY RAQUEL VALDERRAMA, STUDENT NEWS WRITER

Every summer Campbellsville University hosts an event for children called Kids College where children in grades second through seventh try new and fun events while “going to college.”

The children get an option to choose from classes such as: Cool Science, Archery, Cooking up a Storm, Amazing Art and Microsoft Office Fun.

Over the years, Kids College has only been offered to grades second through seventh, but this year the university launched the first Jr. Kids College open to students in preschool to first grade.

Daran Kennon, industrial education coordinator, said the junior students get a taste of all of the classes offered including: Tiny Tot Archery, Cool Science, Reading Time, Amazing Art and Kindle Fun.

Kennon has been working with children and youth for years, and Kids College is something he’s found a great passion for.

“Kids College is something that is right up my alley you

American Legion Kentucky Boys State instrumental group in new flag plaza on campus

BY AUSTIN FITZGERALD, INTERN WRITER

Due to the work of the American Legion Boys State, Campbellsville University now has three new flag poles and flags in a new plaza on Stapp Lawn.

A dedication for the flags was held during the group’s meeting on campus June 2-8.

This is the third year in a row the group has held their camp on campus.

Last year Dr. Peter Trzop, the director of Kentucky Boys State, met with Dr. Michael V. Carter, Campbellsville University’s president, with plans of installing a plaque and a flagpole on campus. The plans went into effect and the final project was dedicated to Kentucky Boys State this year while the camp was still in session. 🐾

Baseball and men's tennis win NCCAA national championships to lead Campbellsville's first NCCAA Presidential Award for top athletic program in country

BY JORDAN ALVES, SPORTS INFORMATION DIRECTOR

For the first time in program history, Campbellsville University had a pair of NCCAA National Championships in the same season.

The men's tennis team rolled through the NCCAA Championship in Mobile, Ala., allowing only two points in five matches and sweeping three matches to earn its third banner in the last seven years and two of the last four.

The baseball program had to fight its way through pool play with a 2-2 record and upset No. 1-seed Biola University in the semifinal to punch its ticket to the finals. The Tigers then held on to defeat Warner University, 7-6, in the championship to earn its first NCCAA banner.

Overall in the Presidential Award standings, CU athletics totaled 73 points throughout the span of 2017-18 to outlast Dallas Baptist University by 1.5 points. The Tigers and Lady Tigers earned points in nine NCCAA Championships, including the two national titles this spring to push CU's NCCAA championship total to 17.

But you can't forget about the Fighting Tiger football team. Coach Perry Thomas' Tigers outlasted 18th-ranked Southwestern Assemblies of God University, 41-28, to win its second Victory Bowl title.

After the fall season, CU athletics totaled 32.5 points across four sports. Women's golf and men's cross country earned eight points each, while men's soccer totaled 7.5 and women's volleyball finished NCCAA Runner-Up with nine points.

In the spring, CU had a stellar season totaling 41.5 points. After the two national championships in men's tennis and baseball gathered 12 points each, women's tennis picked up 7.5 points, men's track and field earned six and women's track and field gained three.

"This is an outstanding honor to not only our coaches and student-athletes but also to our athletic department and university as a whole," said Director of Athletics Jim Hardy.

"We won two NCCAA national championships this season, and the Victory Bowl in football, which is the most in a single year in the history of our athletic department. Hard work is paying off on the fields and courts, and we are honored to partner with the NCCAA and its mission of Christ-centered athletic competition as an integral component of education, evangelism and encouragement." 🌱

From Campbellsville Tigers to Kentucky State Troopers; Sandidge, Young and Napier complete KSP Academy

BY CORBIN HARRIS, SPORTS INFORMATION INTERN

Three Campbellsville University student-athlete alumni, Elliott Young, Adam Sandidge and Zach Napier, made a big first step in their careers on June 22, as they graduated from the Kentucky State Police Cadet Class 96 of the Kentucky State Police Academy.

While at Campbellsville, Sandidge, Napier and Young studied criminal justice and used their classes to develop relationships with each other. As Napier and Sandidge were teammates on the cross country and track and field teams, they were able to use their time together to become best friends and ultimately learn to rely on each other for help through the Academy.

Even before attending Campbellsville, Napier and Sandidge knew they were pursuing the same careers and immediately a friendship began. Along with his relationship with Sandidge, Napier also knew Young was pursuing a similar career path because they attended high school together at Bullitt East in Mt. Washington, Ky.

The three athletes shined throughout their time as Tiger student-athletes. In cross country, Sandidge and Napier helped lead the team to their first Mid-South Conference Championship title in 2015, along with two runner-up finishes and a third-place conference championship finish. Along with the MSC title, the running duo helped the Tigers finish Top 20 at the NAIA National Championship for the first time in team history, and two top three finishes at the NCCAA National Championships.

Individually, Sandidge ran a personal best 8K time of 24:51. He stood out his junior year as he was a Mid-South Conference Champion, NCCAA National Champion, NAIA All-American, indoor track and field NAIA 3K qualifier, and an outdoor track 5K Mid-South Conference Champion as well as an NAIA National qualifier.

Throughout his time at Campbellsville, he was also a three-time NCCAA All-American, three-time Mid-South Conference first team All-Conference, a three-time NAIA Championship individual qualifier.

Throughout his career, Napier ran a career best 8K time of 27:39. He played a key role his sophomore year in trying to help the Tigers seal their first conference championship. As the sixth runner on the team, Napier had to step up to ensure he didn't cost his team the championship as he could serve as the potential tiebreaker. Off the course, Napier worked as a team leader and helped lead the team in Bible studies as well as teaching younger athletes discipline and the work it takes to have success in the Tiger program.

Young also had a stellar career. He starred on the court with the men's basketball team and helped lead the Tigers to a 83-47 record during his four-year career. During his time, the Tigers won a Mid-South Conference Championship and appeared in two NAIA Tournaments, as well as a visit to the NAIA Fab Four.

He finished his career by scoring 1,051 points, recorded 99 career blocks and grabbed 550 rebounds, while shooting 43% from the field.

Before entering the Academy, cadets must pass written and physical tests, an oral board interview, a polygraph and a background investigation. These tests can be mentally exhausting as they take many hours and the cadets spent a lot of time traveling back and forth from Campbellsville to Frankfort. However, their relationship with each other greatly helped.

"Every step we had, we just worked together, and held each other accountable," said Napier.

On January 9, 2018, these former Tigers began their journey through the KSP Academy – an intense 23-week military environment designed to teach the Cadets different skills necessary to be a Kentucky State Trooper. Through this 23-week program, the cadets received more than 1,000 hours of training in all aspects of law enforcement. During the week, the cadets lived at the Academy before being dismissed on Friday and returning Sunday afternoon. The Academy is a tough environment that requires rigorous physical activity, along with the troopers at the Academy playing mind games with the cadets to challenge them to be ready physically and mentally for any situation they could combat as a Kentucky State Trooper.

The preparation for the Academy was difficult at times; it did not compare to the toughness the cadets had while at the Academy. Through the numerous trials and tribulations, these former Tigers held one another accountable and encouraged each other to not quit. Historically, 35 percent of cadets do not complete the program and the 75-person class dropped to 42 people by the time graduation hit.

Young, Napier and Sandidge rarely got to interact during the week; they tried to use body signals to send any signs of encouragement to their fellow cadets.

"This was one of the hardest parts of Academy because of the relationship we have built," said Napier. "We have known each other for so long and were close for so long, we couldn't interact with each other as much as we used to."

Since they couldn't typically interact, Napier said during their physical activity, he usually tried to wait for Young and Sandidge to work out together, so they could show any sign of encouragement possible.

Although quitting was certainly not far from the minds of these former Tigers, their relationship with each other built a small community that drove each of them to persevere to graduation.

Along with this, the three of them decided prior to the beginning of Academy they would not let each other quit. These Tigers have found their calling and their time at Campbellsville and relationship in athletics has made it easier to pursue it. 🐾

Dunagan and Ratliff finish runner-up at Bassmaster College Series Championship

BY JORDAN ALVES, SPORTS INFORMATION DIRECTOR

Bradley Dunagan and Nick Ratliff caught the biggest bag of the 2018 Carhartt Bassmaster College Series National Championship presented by Bass Pro Shops and finished runner-up on Lake Tenkiller July 21.

The Tahlequah, Oklahoma crowd on the Northeastern State University campus erupted in screams as Dunagan of Monticello, Ky., and Ratliff of Vine Grove, Ky., dragged a big green 6-pound anchor across the stage and posted 18 pounds, 2 ounces to climb from fifth place to snatch the hot seat away from West Virginia University's Nolan Minor and Casey Lanier, who posted 15-4 of their own on the final day. The tourney was July 19-21.

But Bethel University's Garrett Enders and Cody Huff, who started the day in first place, jumped the Tigers with a final day total of 9-pounds 2-ounces and went wire-to-wire claiming the national title.

"Seeing Nick and Bradley compete and adjust the way they did this week was by far one of the best things you can witness as a coach," said Pete Hedgepath, head coach. "Nick actually was a part of the first bass fishing team at Campbellsville and is a savvy veteran. He took Bradley under his wing this year and the two have made quite the team. Both of them have become better

Campbellsville University named MSC Athletic Training Staff of the Year for second time

Campbellsville University has more than 700 student-athletes and one department of seven deals with every one of them on a daily basis. The CU athletic training staff was honored on June 9 at Bowling Green's Sloan Convention Center as the Mid-South Conference's Athletic Training Staff of the Year.

The award for Campbellsville University is the second in the last four seasons.

"I am very excited for our athletic training staff for receiving this award," said CU Director of Athletics Jim Hardy. "They are a very deserving group of professionals. Derek Port has assembled a great staff to assist our coaches and student-athletes. I have said on numerous occasions that this group works harder, and more hours, than any other group on our campus."

Port and his staff, Josh Hawkins, Gabby Kirsch, Colleen Reminsky, Kaitlyn Sanfilippo, Katie Niemic and Keri Coots, led efforts at multiple Mid-South Conference championships providing medical services.

Port, the chair of the MSC Medical Staff, also led all medical aspects to provide coverage at every conference tournament, including the NAIA Opening Round Championships for baseball and softball in Bowling Green.

The staff has seen many changes during the previous few years. Port has two trainers on the staff who have been at Campbellsville more than two years, but the department continues to bond well with coaches and student-athletes.

In addition to the athletic training services, CU athletics added Keri Coots as the insurance clerk starting in 2016-17.

"My staff has gone through a large change in the past few years by losing staff members and adding additional athletic trainers," said Port. "For the staff to come together and earn this award is an amazing recognition and a testament to their abilities as athletic trainers. I am proud of their progress this last year and look forward to the continued growth of our athletic department and athletic training department." 🐾

Former CU Men's Golf Coach, P.J. Throckmorton, dies at 87

BY JORDAN ALVES, SPORTS INFORMATION DIRECTOR

On March 22, Campbellsville University learned of the death of former men's and women's golf coach, P.J. Throckmorton. He was 87.

Throckmorton coached Campbellsville University men's and women's golf programs from 2002 until 2008. In his six-year tenure, his accomplishments and accolades speak for themselves.

Overall, his men's teams racked up an amazing 12 wins, with two Mid-South Conference Championships, one Region 11 Championship and one NAIA National Championship appearance. He was also named MSC Coach of the Year in 2005-2006 and MSC and Region 11 Coach of the Year for the 2007-2008 season.

The 2007-2008 team was arguably his best team (and best in school history). That team is still the highest ranked in school history at No. 15 in the NAIA Poll, lowest season scoring average (297.5), season wins (6), most birdies in a season (350), lowest 18-hole round against par (280; 8 under); and lowest 36 and 54 hole rounds.

He was a retired sales representative and a member of First United Methodist Church and Cornerstone Christian Church. He was manager of horse farms in Pennsylvania, Kentucky and California; a Clark County 4-H Youth Leader; a Sphar Seed Company Eastern Kentucky Representative; a Fellowship of Christian Athletes adult leader at the state level and at the University of Kentucky Chapter 1971-1983. He was also a United States Veteran of the Korean War.

In addition to his wife of 64 years, he is survived by one daughter, Beverly G. (Scott) Berryman; two grandchildren, Louis B. (Heather) Graves III and Amy K. (Connor) Gifford; two great grandchildren, Audrey K. Humphries and William Graves. In addition to his parents, he was preceded in death by a daughter, Pamela Jayne Hall and sister, Patricia Ann Nidifer.

"Although this can be said about every person who has lived, Coach PJ was truly unique, one of a kind and there will never be another person quite like him," said former Tiger and current assistant golf coach, Casey Young. "I am not sure if he had a life verse, but for me the verse that best describes him has always been Romans 1:16, — 'For I am not ashamed of the gospel, because it is the power of God that brings salvation to everyone who believes.'"

Young said, "Autobiographies are always lived first; written second. The famous golfer Arnold Palmer wrote his autobiography titled 'A Life Well Played.' Though never written on paper or in a book, PJ Throckmorton lived his autobiography titled 'A Life Unashamed.'" 🍀

Campbellsville University president showcased in '20 People To Know' showcased in '20 People To Know'

BY KASEY RICKETTS, ASSISTANT EDITOR

Campbellsville University's president, Dr. Michael V. Carter, has been featured in Louisville Business First special edition of "20 People To Know in Education."

"Louisville Business First's 'People to Know' puts a spotlight each month on 20 area business professionals in a given industry," Louisville Business First, said.

The May edition put the spotlight on the education industry. "These are business people in key roles that are crucial. People featured run the gamut from behind-the-scenes movers and shakers to new leaders to up-and-comers in the industry," the special section said.

Carter has been in the education field for 43 years. He started his career as a teaching associate at Ohio State University, then moved to Judson College in Elgin, Ill., to be an instructor of sociology and director of Christian ministries. He was also the provost and vice president of academic affairs at Carson-Newman College, serving there 14 years.

"Becoming president of Campbellsville University in 1999 has been a great blessing in my life, and I am so honored to be named in the section," Carter said.

"My home life had a tremendous influence on me. Both of my parents were public school teachers. My mother started in a one-room school in Wayne County, W. Va. She had to drive the creek just the reach the school. Her passion for learning, and my father's discipline for getting it right, left an indelible impression. They both believed in the power of education and were examples of what they believed," Carter said. 🌟

Guess Who?

Only one person, Rollin McQueary, got part of the identification of the picture in the spring 2018 issue of the Campbellsvillian. He guessed Clem Haskins, which was correct, but Larry Johnson was the other person. It was taken in 1977.

This issue's Guess Who? is of two students at a Homecoming. Guess the students and you will win a Campbellsville University T-shirt.

Contact Joan McKinney with your guesses at jcmckinney@campbellsville.edu, (270) 789-5214 or Campbellsville University, #787, 1 University Drive, Campbellsville, KY 42718.

We will announce the winner 10 days after we receive the Campbellsvillian in the mail.

Good luck! 🐾

Alumni Greetings

from Darryl Peavler ('03, '05)

Dear Alumni and Friends,

We are quickly approaching this year's Homecoming festivities on Oct. 5 and 6!

Campbellsville University will honor our nation and our veterans with the Homecoming theme, "Stars and Stripes."

Campbellsville University has a rich history that spans 112 years. The history would not be nearly as rich without the veterans who have fought for and defended our freedoms. This year we will honor all veterans, but especially those who are CU alumni, faculty, staff and students! Stay tuned to the Alumni and Friends page at www.campbellsville.edu/homecoming for more details on events, special recognitions and reunions!

Class of 1968, this is your year! During Homecoming, the Class of 1968 will be inducted into the Golden Heritage Club in celebration of your 50th class year reunion. All existing Golden Heritage Club members are invited to attend the induction ceremony and reunion to help the Class of '68 celebrate such a huge milestone!

Last year you made waves with CU's first Maroon and Gray Give Day! CU Alumni and Friends gave a total of 1,162 gifts in 24 hours! That's the most gifts ever received in that short time span.

Let's do it again this year! Saturday, Oct. 6, will be our 2nd Annual Maroon and Gray Give Day. This year's goal is 1,500 gifts. Remember, the amount doesn't matter, only that you give. Feel free to make multiple gifts during the day. I will be doing the same!

Gifts can be made on campus at the Give Centers, or online at www.campbellsville.edu/GIVE! Let's make history again this year.

I certainly hope to see each of you at this year's Homecoming Celebration!

Forever Maroon and Gray,

Director of Alumni Relations
