A Framework for Narrative Forensic Interviewing of School Shooting Survivors: Building the Foundation of the Framework on School Shooting Survivors' Narratives

Dr. Mudd-Fegett partnered with six survivors of five school shootings to narrate their experience. Through this qualitative research project, Dr. Mudd-Fegett highlighted the importance of narrative interviewing and developed the Mudd-Fegett Ethic of Care Narrative Interview Approach.

- 2021 What Do My Peers Know About Child About Protection Services?
Dr. Mudd-Fegett, Dr. VanCleave and BSW student Kristen Thomas partnered together in a mixed method research project to explore what undergraduate and graduate students currently enrolled with Campbellsville Carver School of Social Work knew about child protection services.
- 2015 Action Research in Child Welfare
This study examined secondary trauma of frontline child welfare workers through online survey and guided focus groups
- 2013 Transdisciplinary Collaboration and Employment Sustainability of Child Welfare Graduates
This study examined Campbellsville Carver School of Social Work graduates to explore sustainability and success of Public Child Welfare Certification Program Graduate
- 2004-2005 Domestic Violence and Child Repeat Maltreatment
This study examined 121 closed child protective service cases to answer the research question, “What is the relationship between repeat child maltreatment and domestic violence?”
